Pre-Election Blast In Lisbon Deepens Tense Atmosphere

Special to The New York Times LISBON, Dec. 9-A powerful bomb explosion early today disrupted Lisbon's water supply and heightened the atmospere of tension three days before municipal elections.

A series of bombings, election campaign incidents and wide resistance to official reforms appear to be aimed at discrediting the minority Government of the Socialist Party leader, Mário Soares.

The Government has reacted firmly, putting security forces on the alert, closing down university faculties, suspending farm credits and warning Communistdominated farm workers that it will use "all means" to enforce the law. These measures, however, have not put an end to the agitation and are expected to cost the Socialists many votes.

Trudeau Puts Ex-Aide in Senate

Special to The Key York Times OTTAWA, Dec. 9—Jean Marchand, a once-powerful Cabinet minister who was recently defeated in the Quebec electoral sweep of a separatist party, was named to the Senate today by Prime Minister Pictre Elliott Trudeau. Members of the Senate, which has less power than its American counterpart are appointed by American counterpart, are appointed by the Prime Minister. Those appointed be-fore 1965 serve for life, later appointees till they become 75 years old.

Money May Play a Big Part .

Rissinger's vanity that he says that one reason he will leave Washington is to avoid being seen at embassy dinners and upstaging Mr. Vance.

Money is probably a factor in Mr. Kissinger's future, because he has no hissinger's future, because he has no independent income and reportedly owes his brother Walter a considerable sum that he wants to repay as soon as possible. For the moment, Henry Kissinger is rejecting various proposals that he act as a "special envoy" for President Carter, and he says that he will not join any committees or do-good commissions.

Mr. Kissinger has been bombarded with requests for "reflective" interviews. His spokesman said he has turned down more than 40. Obviously, as a historian. Mr. Kissinger is interested in explaining, in his terms, what happened over the past eight years, but not now.

A question by a German reporter vesterday summed it up: "If you look back on your term in office, can you tell me what you consider to be your greatest success and your greatest failure?" The reply:

"I don't understand your second point (laughter). I have never answered this question in America. I believe now at the end of my term that the record is there, and each one has to draw his own conclusions." Then, in simpler terms, Mr. Kissinger gave a pragmatic and, again, humorous analysis of his inability to define his place in the future. Asked if he had selected an artist to paint his official portrait to hang with those of other Secretaries of State on the seventh floor of the State Department, he said: "I pick the artist but Vance picks

Japanese Military Favors F-15 as Basic Plane

TOKYO, Friday, Dec. 10 (AP)—Japanese military officials have tentatively decided on McDounell-Douglas Corporation's F-15 Eagle fighters planes as the mainstay of the nation's air force, Defense Agency officials said today.

The selection by the Defense Agency is one step in a lengthy process of approval. At this stage there is no assurance of eventual final selection.

The agency officials reported that the

The agency officials reported that the tentative decision had been made yesterday at a meeting of top military officers with Michita Sakata, chief of the agency. The decision is now subject to approval by the Minister of Defense, by the Na-tional Defense Council headed by the Prime Minister and by the Finance Min-ister. However the Finance Ministry has already said that money for this purpose would not be available in the next fiscal year, beginning April 1, 1977.

If the Defense Agency's plan is approved, five squadrons with a total of 123 F-15's would be deployed beginning an April 1981. The Eagles would replace W-104 Starfighters, which are considered obsolete. The Eagle was chosen over two other United States-made fighters, the Grumman Corporation's F-14 and the General Dynamics Corporation's F-16.

Afghanistan Said to Hold

50 in Plot Against Leader ISLAMABAD, Pakistan, Dec. 9 (Reuters) -More than 50 people have been arrested in Afghanistan accused of plotting to overthrow President Mohammad Daud, reliable sources said here today.

The plotters were reported to have been led by Gen. Mir Ahmed Shah, who retired from the army last year, the sources said.

An undisclosed number of the supposed plotters, who were rounded up by security forces about two weeks ago, were military personnel, but no actual coup attempt took place and there was no bloodshed, the sources said.

They added that the conspiracy apparently resulted from disenchantment with-in the armed forces with President Daud, who came to power in July 1973 in a military coup that ousted King Mohammad Zahir.

The Kabul Times, Afghanistan's official and only English-language newspaper, said two days ago there had been a conspiracy involving Mir Ahmed Shah.

Qaddafi Ends 4-Day Visit To the Soviet Union

after four days of talks that involved more time with the Kremlin leaders than foreign visitors usually receive.

The Libyan leader was seen off by President Nikolai V. Podgorny and Foreign Minister Andreign Minister Mi eign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko after a last round of talks, which were also joined by Leonid L Brezhnev, the party chief, and by Prime Minister Aleksei N.

Kosygin.

The two sides signed an agreement on shipping and a program for cultural cooperation and initialed a summary of their talks on economic and technical cooperation. Libys has bought formal technical cooperation. Libya has bought Soviet arms in the past and is one of Moscow's closest allies in the Middle East.

Irish High Court Orders Retrial of an Anarchist

DUBLIN, Dec. 9 (AP)—A husband and wife, both confessed anarchists convicted in the shooting of an off-duty policeman, escaped the gallows today in a Supreme Court decision that postpones a showdown over the death penalty.

The five-man Supreme Court, by a 3-to-2 margin, ordered Marie Murray, 27, retried on a capital murder charge. She had confessed to firing the shot that killed an off-daty policeman who pursued them after a bank raid in September 1975.

Her husband, Noel Murray, 26, was given a life jail term in place of the execution sentence handed down in June. The death penalty, which has not been carried out for 22 years, applies to murders of heads of state, diplomats and police officers. The Murrays appealed the death sentence on the ground that they had no way of knowing that their victim was a police officer.

Talks on Panama Canal

Resume Next Weeek WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP)-Negotiations for a new Panama Canal treaty will resume next week in Panama, the State Department said today. Ambassador Ells-worth Bunker will fly there Monday to resume the talks, which have been in recess since October. The decision to resume the negotiations follows a series of meetings with United States officials by the Panamanian Foreign Minister, Aquilino Boyd. While he was in Washington, the Panamanian envoy had said he hoped a new accord to replace the 1903 treaty could be reached by the spring.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger recently tried to complete a pact before recently tried to complete a pact before 20. But Panama found several aspects of 20. But Panama found several aspects of the American proposal unacceptable. The main obstacles to a treaty remain its duration and aspects of the defense of the waterway, officials said.

François Chiappe, a 56-year-old Corsican who was one of the leaders of a major narcotics ring that spanned three continents and brought six tons of heroin into the United States, was convicted yesterday by a Federal jury in Brooklyn on a charge of conspiracy to import and distribute heroin.

Also convicted, after the jury deliberated for 15 hours, was Miguel Russo, 44; an Italian national who recruited couriers for the ring and supervised the transportation of heroin from France into the United States. 4:00 through

David G. Trager, the United States Attorney for the Eastern District, said yesterday: "The conviction of these two men effectively immobilizes a ring that has been a major source of heroin smuggled into the United States."

According to investigators for the Drug

The drafting of the treaty is to be undertaken by a 35-member committee that is expected to begin work in August and attempt to come up with a text by the next Assembly in September.

Under the compromise reached today, Libva dropped its insistence on having the treaty's protection apply to "innocent" hostages only. To meet Arab objections, the sponsors dropped a provision saying that the taking of hostages should be condemned, prohibited and punished and that those involved should be prosecuted or extradited for prosecution.

Is at night was Lieut. John H. Bermudez, who, when asked to comment about Captain Renzullo, said: "It should be refreshing. The scuttlebut is that she is very competent."

Officer William Andruzzi, when he entered the station house and was asked how he thought about "her" as a new captain, responded:

"She? She?" Then, after a pause, he said: "Well, she's still a captain. I magine she did all right here."

Another police officer, Anthony Perillo, added: "It ought to be an experience. Especially when she bawis you out."

Detective John Worth said: "She's going to be a woman in a man's world. We'll have to wait and see how it works out." their new captain would be a woman.
The general attitude seemed to be that she had probably earned the command.

The precinct has attracted particular attention in the last few years because it was there that judges, other public offi-cials and police officers who were charged with irregularities by the former special prosecutor, Maurice H. #### Impact on Conservative Arabs

The Palestinians have lost politically as well. Their display of power in Leba-non frightened the rulers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and other Persian Gulf countries, which wondered whether a similar Pales-tinian "revolution" could not one day threaten them. Indeed, Fatah's associa-tion with the Lebanese leftists convinced some conservative Arab leaders that the Liberation Organization was only a Trojan horse for Communism.

Despite all that has happened, the cut-look for the Palestinians is not entirely poor. The number of trained fighters in poor. The number of trained fighters in Lebanon is larger than at the start of the war. Regular units of the Palestine Liberation Army that had been stationed in Syria, Egypt and Iraq were brought here during the war and are still here, and with the exception of some from Syria they are under Mr. Arafat's control. The war appears to have strengthened the nationalist fervor of rank-and-file Palestinians: it was the sort of experience required to build a nation, a Palestinian intellectual remarked.

Trying to Change the Leaders

While the ordinary Palestinians return to familiar ways, Syria is working through Saiqa to try to oust the Libera-tion Organization's leaders. Having been driven out of Palestinian strongholds in Beirut on June 6, a week after the Syrians entered Lebanon in force, Saiga is back with 8,300 soldiers in Beirut and 2,000 more in Nabatyeh and Saida. It has reoccupied its headquarters at the refugee camp, driving out Palestinians loyal to Mr. Arafat in a gun battle that cost 12

The Syrians do not hide their hold on Saiga. At the headquarters a tough-look-ing Syrian officer fondling a riding crop that appeared to conceal a weapon relin-quished his place beneath President Hafez ai-Assad's picture to Saiqa's civilian spokesman. The spokesman, Ossama Bayrakdar, speaking excellent English to a reporter, identified himself as a Syrian citizen and an cfficial of the governing Baath Party and the Information Ministry as well as head of the Saiqa information office in Lebanon.

"We won't tolerate the present P.L.O. leadership," he said. "They must all go, including Arafat." He ticked off the names of the four men who, with Mr. Arafat, are running Fatah: Abu Iyad, Farouk Kaddoumi, Abu Jihad and Abu Saleh, and added that of Nayef Hawatmeh, head of the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxis-group that is Fatah's close ally.

Mr. Iyad, the second-ranking man and a hard-liner standing to the left of Mr. Arafat, had the overall direction of the confrontation with Syria. He often aitacked Mr. Assad personally and vituperatively. Last spring he declared that the road to the liberation of Palestine led through Aintura and Junich, Aintura | carrier comp and always adds an extra being a mountain village 20 miles northeast of Beirut and Junieh, the "capital" of the right-wing Lebanese Christians in

Workers in 15 States Accept New Contract Offer — Predict They Will Be Back on Job Monday

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (UPI)—Some 18,000 employees of the United Parcel Service voted by a substantial majority said were employed by the C.I.A. today to end a 12-week walkout that has delayed delivery of many Christmas pack-

Executives of the parcel service in Greenwich, Conn., refused to say immedi-

The parcel service employees have been on strike since Sept. 16, affecting a 15state area from Maine to South Carolina. New York City workers did not strike,

Burden Assumed by Postal Service

Although the burden of deliveries by the parcel service was assumed by the United States Postal Service and small private shippers, the strike caused many delays for retailers awaiting Christmas merchandise. Consumers were forced to ship their gifts earlier than usual.

Postal Service business on the East Coast was more than doubled by the strike, forcing it to hire more than 10,000 extra workers. But officials of the parcel service, the nations' largest private parcel delivery service, said that the strike had not yet interfered with is holiday delivery peak, which normally occurs about 10 days before Christmas.

Company negotiators reportedly backed down on two key strike issues, a liberal dismissal policy and the right to replace full-time workers by attrition with parttimers. The union, meanwhile, relin-quished its demand to control pension funds for part-time workers.

Wages Raised by $2

The striking employees currently earn a maximum of about $7 an hour. Although the new offer varies by region, it would raise the full-time hourly wage by about $2 over the next two and one

Part-timers Were Main Issue

Under terms of the agreement, parttime employees "got much more in impor-tant areas than we thought they would," conceded Rita Drabkin, a spokesman for Upsurge, the reform group in the United

Parcel wing of the teamsters. The main issue in the strike was the company's desire to replace full-time workers with part-time workers. In the ship's crew. # PARCEL SERVICE VOTE | Participant Tells of C.I.A. Ruses to Hide Glomar Project

By SEYMOUR M. HERSH The Central Intelligence Agency used secret stairways, fake offices, hideaway apartments and even set up a spurious marine engineering concern in Los Angeles as part of an effort to maintain the secrecy of its 1974 attempt to salvage a sunken Soviet submarine, according to a participant in the project.

The participant, Wayne R. Collier of Houston, who was in charge of recruitment for the unsuccessful project, told in a recent series of interviews of elaborate and expensive cover efforts that he Greenwich, Conn., refused to say immediately when deliveries might resume; but the strikers predicted they would be back at work by Monday.

The International Brotherhood of Teamsters announced that the company's latest contract offer had been accepted by a "large majority." Earlier returns showed a margin of more than 3 to 1 in favor of the back-to-work proposal.

Human Error Cited in Failure

In an interview published yesterday in The New York Times, Mr. Collier and his younger brother, Billy C. Collier, told how a human error had been responsible for the CLA's failure to recover all of the submarine, which sank in 1968 about 750 miles north of Hawaii. Only the forward third of the vessel was salvaged.

The brothers said that the agency had invested more than $500 million in the project, roughly half of it in construction costs for the main recovery vessel, the Glomar Explorer. The huge ship was built between 1971 and 1974 in a Chester, Pa. shippard ostensibly for Howard R. Hughes's Summa Corporation, and-so the C.I.A. cover story went—was going to be a revolutionary development in deep-sea ocean mining, capable of sweeping up valuable minerals from the ocean floor. The vessel was said publicly to be managed by Global Marine Inc., a Californiaages by choose a concern known for its ex-pertise in deep-sea drilling and explorato-ry work. In fact, according to Wayne Collier, and independently confirmed by others, Global Marine played a far more

One of its vice presidents, John R. Graham, now deceased, was a main designer of the submarine recovery vessel, according to Mr. Collier. Mr. Graham and others who were involved in the design and mechanical aspects of the vessel were employees of a new subsidiary of Global Marine, known as Global Marine Development Inc., he said. The concern was organized by the C.I.A. for security reasons, Mr. Collier said.

The new concern, which had about 75 employees, was established in separate quarters in the Tishman Building in Los Angeles and it was in those offices, Mr. Collier said, that he began recruiting the

Even in that building, Mr. Collier recalled, the CLA men made a practice of leaving the elevator on the fifth floor and then walking via a specially built staircase to a series of secret offices on the sixth

Mr. Coilier said that a senior C.I.A. official once explained that deception was necessary because there were, in fact, some offices on the sixth floor that had been leased to the Veterans' Administration, a Federal agency. Since the fifth-floor offices were marked "Summa Corp. Global Marine," Mr. Collier said, it-was decided not to run the risk of having a C.I.A. official observed going both into the Global Marine offices on the fifth-and also going to the sixth floor, where there were known Federal Government

The CLA's concern, Mr. Collier said, was that someone would conclude that the Global Marine offices were associated with the Government. This may sound with the Government. "his may sound silly," Mr. Collier added, "but it was one of the agency's methods of operating and they were very strict with the policy."

All CLA employees, he said, had to get off the elevator at the fifth floor and use the secret stairway to get to their upstairs office.

As a further precaption, Mr. Collier said, the C.I.A. also maintained a series of rented rooms in the Tishman Building, wo floors below those of the development company. Those were for emergency use in case it was discovered that the agency was running the operation out of its San Fernando office, he said.

On Fridays, Mr. Collier said, officials from the development company and from CLA headquarters would meet to discuss Ban Ag. the operation in one of two "safe houses," fashionable apartments leased in nearby Santa Monica and Long Beach. Once recruited and cleared for a briefing on the submarine recovery project, a process that often took three months or more, Mr. Collier said, the crew mem-bers were provided with two weeks of intensive training by the C.LA. at a spe-cial facility near Redwood City, Calif.

There the men studied rudimentary Russian, he said, and received intensive instruction on what to expect aboard the Soviet vessel. # STATE DEPT. REJECTS 2D PROTEST BY SEOUL

Tells Korea Statement on Alleged Bugging of the Presidential Residence Is 'Not Helpful'

By RICHARD HALLORAN pecial to The New York Time

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9-The Department of State rejected today another South Korean ultimatum, the second in two days, and publicly told the Govern-ment in Seoul that its demanding statements were "not helpful."

The Korean Minister of Culture and Information, Kim Seong Jin, issued a statement in Seoul this morning demand-ing that the United States "clarify in pub-lic" whether American intelligence had put President Park Chung Hee's office under electronic surveillance, as alleged in news reports.

If the United States refuses to comply with the Korean demand, Mr. Kim said, the Korean Government will investigate and take "appropriate measures." The measures were not described. If evidence of bugging is found, Mr. Kim said, that will "cast doubt on American morality."

John Trattner, the State Department's spokesman, told newsmen today that there would be no official comment on the reports of bugging. Earlier, other officials said privately that they feared they would have to answer too many questions even if they publicly denied the press reports.

Retort Described as Sharp

Mr. Trattner, asked about the demands from Seoul in the last two days, said, "We have conveyed to the Korean Goverament our feeling that the statements were not helpful." While mild by ordinary standards of English, those words, according to officials, constituted a sharp retort by State Department standards.

The Koreans demanded yesterday that the United States release a defector from the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Sang Keun, who is cooperating with a Federal inquiry into alleged Korea bribery of American Congressmen. The State Department replied that Mr. Kim had chosen to stay in America of his own will.

Officials here indicated that they did not know why the Koreans had suddenly chosen to get into a public fight with the United States when they were eager to retain an American military and economic commitment, including the presence of 42,000 American soldiers in South Korea own will.

In any event, it was evident that the South Koreans were serious because the statements came from a Cabinet minister, would not act without the President's specific direction.

It was also clear that the statements were directed at the United States and were not for domestic political consumption. They were delivered only to representatives of the foreign press in Seoul and were not published locally in Korea.

Strict Korean Censorship
The Korean Government has maintained a strict censorship over any mention of the alleged wrongdoings in the Korean press. But politically alert Koreans were said to be well-informed by a sophisticat-ed grapevine developed in the forty years of Japanese occupation that ended in Today's Korean demand, the text of. which was obtained from the Korean Embassy here, said: "The Korean Government has repeatedly demanded that the authorities concerned of the United States clarify in public whether or not United States organizations did indeed bug the Presidential residence of Korea, a sovereign state and an ally of the Unit-

It said that "the failure by the United States side to provide a convincing clarification in public has given rise to continued speculation and distortions, which are quite detrimental to the interests of both the Republic of Korea and the United States." The statement went on to say that Koreans would investigate if the United States did not explain and would act in accord with their own laws if they discovered that Americans had committed unlawful acts.

The statement concluded: "Such acts, if committed, would not only cast doubt on American morality but also adversely affect the friendly relationship between the Republic of Korea and the United

Trial of Pressmen Is Postponed; Judge Cites Fear of Tainted Jury

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP)-The trial of 15 former Washington Post pressmen on charges of rioting and destroying property was postponed today until Feb. 14.

Superior Court Judge Sylvia Bacon ruled that there had been "improper conduct with regard to the jury panel."

"One member was approached in a manner which was improper," she said. In addition, she told prospective jurors, "Improper investigative techniques were used with regard to new jurors." The action came before a jury had been selected for the trial, but the judge expressed fear that the entire jury panel had been tainted and said she was not certain that the defendants could receive

Priority for Panama

The 73d anniversary of the signing of the Panama Canal treaty last month passed without notice in the United States but not in Panama. There, students and others staged ceremonial burnings of the treaty, which gave the United States control of the ten-mile-wide Canai Zone "in perpetuity." Foreign Minister Aquilino Boyd attended one such demonstration in Panama City.

Since then, Mr. Boyd has won agreement in Washington from Secretary of State Kissinger for another round of negotiations for a new canal treaty, even before Jimmy Carter becomes President next month, in an effort to narrow remaining differences between the two Governments. But the Panamanians know that any substantive progress must await the new Administration.

The new canal treaty is, indeed, the most critical issue facing the Carter Administration in the Western Hemisphere, Unless the United States is ready to conclude an agreement that will provide for eventual Panamanian control of the territory that cuts the Republic in two, President Carter and Secretary of State Vance will be unable to create an effective policy for the Americas.

Panama is the issue that unites virtually all of Latin America against the Yankees and the one conspicuous symbol remaining of the era of Washington's "Big Stick" diplomacy and "Manifest Destiny." Latin American school children learn, even if students in the United States do not, that no Panamanian signed the treaty under which this country took control of the Zone and built the canal. Anyone who has visited the great waterway knows it could easily be disabled by a guerrilla force bent on doing so.

Until Ronald Reagan injected Panama into the battle for the Republican Presidential nomination, the Ford Administration had negotiated honorably and responsibly for a new treaty aimed at insuring freedom of access to the canal and an American share in its defense against outside attack, while providing for eventual restoration of Panamanian sovereignty over the Zone. It ought to be the Carter Administration's highest Hemisphere priority to bring those negotiations to a successful conclusion.

In campaign debate, Mr. Carter declared he would "never give up complete control or practical control" of the Canal Zone. But he promised to "continue-to negotiate with the Panamanians," and eventually revised his "never" to "anytime in the foreseeable future." Under principles accepted by the last three American Presidents he has to be willing to set a date for relinquishing control of the Zone if any negotiations are to have any chance. Mr. Carter should clarify his policy on this most critical of Hemisphere issues—and the sooner the better.

Salaries and Ethics

While those who follow politics have been spending recent weeks devouring each new morsel about the shaze of the new Cabinet, a Presidential commission has been concluding some quieter work on a more fundamental task of equal urgency. The Presidential Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries made a sweeping report to President Ford last week. The governmental response to its recommendations may well determine the quality of the people who make the wheels of government turn.

The commission is a statutory entity formed every four years to advise the President on the appropriate top salaries in the executive branch, the Federal judiciary, the Congress; and for the Vice President.

With the exception of one 5 percent raise, Congress has been unwilling over the last seven years to deal with the problems of inadequate compensation for those officials. Thus, in a period during which a survey of 318 private companies showed that executive pay had increased 52.5 percent, while the consumer price index for urban wage earners and clerical employees increased 60.5 percent, some of the nation's most important public servants were being asked to struggle along at essentially 1969 pay levels. As a result, the executive branch has been losing top professionals at a rapid rate. Even some Federal judges have left the bench, while other talented prospects have refused to consider appointments.

The commission correctly perceived that it was dealing with a problem significantly larger than pay levels alone. It sought to create a framework in which top Federal jobs would not only carry fair remuneration, but the image and the reality of rectitude and honor as well. Consequently, in addition to suggesting executive salaries sufficiently high to attract and retain men and women of talent, it proposed that a code of public conduct be linked to whatever salary proposals the President makes.

In broad outline the code would provide for true public disclosure by top Federal executives, judges and legislators of their financial affairs; restrictions on earned outside income; strict conflict-of-interest provisions and limitations on outside employment after Gov-

The problem of talent leakage from the Federal Government cannot be attacked successfully in bits and pieces. People don't join the Government-or they leave it -- because the salaries are currently too low and because the activity is held in low esteem. Congress won't raise pay to adequate levels because it thinks the public is scandalized by gross and inappropriate conduct on the part of public officials.

There could be no more propitious time for reform. Initiation of such an action would be a fitting farewell gesture by the Ford Administration and support for it would seem to be natural for Jimmy Carter.

Pressure to Tap Again

Any suggestion that Attorney General Edward H. Levi might be soft on the protection of the nation's security against foreign espionage sounds like a bad joke. Yet, such a charge is implicit in complaints by senior officials of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Central Intelligence Agency that Mr. Levi, by refusing to approve requests for wiretaps, has hampered their efforts to combat hostile foreign intelligence activities.

The Attorney General's alleged lack of cooperation does not involve electronic surveillance of clandestine foreign intelligence services operating in the United States. What chagrins these intelligence spokesmen is Mr. Levi's scrupulous insistence on a show of "probable cause" in requests for taps on American citizens.

Mr. Levi is clearly right in his view that there should be no "warrantless wiretaps" against Americans and that warrants for surveillance deemed necessary by intelligence agencies ought to be obtained through application to the courts as required under existing Federal law.

Intelligence officials reportedly object to this procedure because the courts demand too much information concerning the background of their requests. This is merely another way of saying that they distrust the system of law which is supposed to be binding on those who represent the government, just as it is on the conduct of ordinary citizens. To portray the courts as less trustworthy than the intelligence establishment paints a rather defeatist-and, we believe, distorted-picture.

It is particularly disconcerting that these criticisms are being voiced at this time—so late in the Attorney General's tenure that they have the ring of an appeal to President-elect Carter to appoint a more cooperative successor to Mr. Levi. The proper response by the incoming Administration ought to be to reinforce the reforms introduced by Mr. Levi and to continue to repair the foundations of trust which were eroded by a succession of domestic and foreign intelligence officials who considered their judgment so infallible that they claimed the right to operate outside the law.

Adirondack Showdown

When the State of New York accepted the Adirondack Park Agency's plan for overseeing the uses of private lands within the park, it also created a Local Government Review Board to represent the communities. This board's function was to advise, assist and monitor the agency.

Going far beyond that duty, the board is now calling for abolition of the A.P.A. It has voted, 11 to 1, to ask the state to transfer the agency's functions to the Department of Environmental Conservation-with a considerable degree of power to be surrendered thereby.

Governor Carey and the Legislature would best serve the interests of the people of the state by firmly rejecting this demand as well as a revived bill to achieve the same end with a little more finesse. Richard B. Purdue. the one member to vote against the board's high-handed action, has charged it with having "completely given in to the bullying methods of a vocal pressure group."

Resigning from the board, Mr. Purdue referred to the "spirit of vengeance" that has marked the long campaign to discredit the work of the agency. Informally, he suggested that the compromise reached in the Legislature last spring between the interests of the agency and those of the communities has been discredited right along by those with a "developer's interest," largely because they fear that it might work. They are not out to ease the strain between the agency and some of the local community governments but to stir up demands for abolition. Himself a land developer, Mr. Purdue is more candid and more imbued with the public interest thanmost of his professional colleagues.

Opponents of the agency like to point out that, after all this time, there are still no A.P.A.-approved programs for the 107 communities within the boundaries of the park. But while only 13 percent of these communities had any zoning at all when the agency came into being, 66 now have planning boards, thanks largely to its influence, 48 have community master plans, 27 have zoning ordinances and 25 have subdivision regulations.

To do away with the agency now-while narrowing the state's area of concern, as the board urges-would restrict control to those comparatively few areas containing wetlands, high peaks, flood plains and the like. It could only encourage density building, with all the harm that such development can do in a park area that is not just the home of a few but a natural treasure held in common by all the people of the state.

On the Right Trak

Amtrak, the national rail passenger service, has issued a host of dull statistics that could add up to an exciting discovery for anyone who hasn't taken a train trip lately.

In the five and one-half years since it took over the private railroads' wornout fleet of dilapidated coaches and wheezing engines, Amtrak reports it has spent or committed $550 million to buy 492 Amfleet cars: 249 bi-level cars; 205 diesel and 26 electric locomotives and 65 Turboliner cars. As a result, 22,400 passengers are again riding daily in a style to which they were no longer accustomed, unless they happened to travel by rail abroad. The spirit of the new trains, which are comfortable and far less subject to breakdown and other delays, appears also to have infected many if not all Amtrak employees-a welcome surprise to a public more accustomed to indifference or even surliness. When trains are delayed, crews have been known recently to inform passengers of the reasons. Edible food is making a comeback, although the old dining service is sorely missed.

Amtrak still has a long way to go, especially in the area of track improvements to speed up schedules and smooth the ride, as well as courtesy to the paying customers. The coming holiday rush undoubtedly will produce difficulties for trainmen and frustration for some passengers. But there can be no doubt that American rails have undergone a change for the better in recent years and that Amtrak at last is on the right track

Of Moscow, MIRV and 'Good News'

To the Editor:

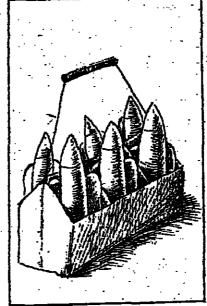

Your "good news" editorial of Dec. 6 entitled "Moscow's Submarine MIRV" is surely provocative. It states that the Soviet Union's first successful test of a submarine-launched ballistic missile armed with MIRV multiple nuclear warheads is "good news" for the United States and the world. The editorial says the Soviets may be willing, as a result of their technological breakthrough, to enter into an agreement stabilizing the nuclear balance for a very long time.

There are certainly many who would contend that such an argument is illogical when one considers the history of Soviet negotiation attitudes, and one may wish to examine the patterns of other "good news" we have received from the Soviet Union recently.

To be consistent with the thought expressed in the editorial, one might then argue that there is even more "good news": The Soviets have in the past decade built a powerful navy while we were cutting ours in half.

Then there is the good news that they have deployed the Kiev-class aircraft carrier with vertical-takeofi-andlanding aircraft and the Delta-class submarine with 4,200-mile-range missiles, which can reach every city in the United States from the home waters of the Soviet fleet.

And finally, there is the good news that they are developing a civil defense program capable of sheltering a major portion of their urban population while we have done little in this area.

An excellent argument can be made that as of today our Navy can still carry out its missions with its twelve remaining carriers. But who among us, recognizing the Soviet building trends. could with certainty make this statement five or ten years hence?

Today our Navy has 40 percent fewer ships than it had at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor. Please, no more "good news" until we have had chance to rebuild our Navy to guarantee into the future our nation's security. J. WILLIAM MIDDENDORF 2d hydroelectric project canceled to save the endangered furbish lousewort will result in generating needed electricity with imported oil and that this will cause inflation [letter Nov. 21].

Please, Mr. Hurwitz, examine your assumptions: that more electricity will be needed and that a new hydropower plant will not be inflationary.

As to the necessity of new generating capacity, we already have more than we need. Presently we are electrified for 13 percent of our energy needs, although electricity is required for only 8 percent of our end-use needs: 4 percent for industrial motors and the other 4 percent for all lighting, electro-chemistry, are welding, railways, home appliances, etc. The excess 5 percent is wasted for such low-grade purposes as heating and-cooling, which could be accomplished more efficiently by a combination of solar technologies, winddriven heat pumps, combustion of methane generated from wastes and salvaged industrial waste heat. Furend-use electrical requirement, about 3 percent could be cut out by conservation and technical adjustments.

As to the second assumption, any

Name in the News To the Editor:

The handwriting is on the wall. This country is developing a major case of soppy Carterphilia, and the major television networks are distinguishing themselves by their irresponsible reporting of pure, unadulterated mush. A large amount of time on a recent evening's newcasts was devoted to such topics as "where Amy will be going to school" and "how Barbara Walters whispered to the President-elect that his daughter left her coat in church"and the denovement thereof.

Surely this sort of trivia could be presented in some format other than the major news slot. After all, there is no dearth of more monumental news. There are events relating to earthquakes, pesticides, national economies, cold and hot war, famine and cures for disease. Why are the private lives of all of the Carters becoming so important? Of course, one must give the networks their due. They are profit-making, and I presume they know their market. Do we then conclude that thoughtful people do not watch the news on TV? F. J. The hearing called by the Public Service Commission to discuss the New York Telephone Company's request for a rate increase is a flagrant act of discrimination against all the senior citizens in the five boroughs in the City of New York. Half of your electric bill in a system of such facilities goes for fixed distribution costs. Generation on a smaller scale, nearer the point of use, preferably using renewable sun, wind or biopower, would cost far less.

In October's Foreign Affairs, Amory Lovins demonstrates further the inflationary nature of the national energy strategy of which the hydroplant in question is a part. This push toward electrification, from our present 13 percent to a level of 20 to 40 percent by the year 2000, will be stunningly capital-intensive. That is, the whole economy will be literally stunned by the cost of the massive electrification: $1 trillion for the decade 1976-85 alone. Strinned because that $1 trillion is an estimated 75 percent of the cumulative net private domestic investment (N.P.D.L) over the decade. Seventy-five percent to the energy sector leaves only 25 percent of the N.P.D.I. for all other purposes. -

Of Landlords and Heat

To the Editor:

In the case of the two landlords arrested for not providing heat, Investigations Commissioner Nicholas Scoppetta has said that landlords who "in good faith try to provide heat and hot water but are unable to for reasonable cause need not worry about the prospect of criminal charges." I won-. der if insufficient rental income would be considered "reasonable cause."

It costs about $450 a year, per apartment, to provide heat. Many apartments in older buildings rent for $35 to $50 a month, which is $420 to $600 a year. At these rentals, it is almost impossible for a landlord to pay for boiler repairs if the boiler breaks down, pay the oil bill and pay the other expenses of running the JESSE BRYANT

Truth in Business News

By James L. Ferguson

I have been trying to develop a better understanding of what is Wrong between business and the press, with the hope of discovering what first steps we might take to set it right. That understanding has not been easy to come by. .

It occurred to me that perhaps the key to the situation lies in the idea that "behavior is a form of communication." I decided to look at the behavior of the news media and see if it was trying to tell us something. It turned out that it was.

By their current pattern of behavior, the media tell us that they are suffering from an "identity crisis." Like a good many other institutions, they are trying to deal with an environment that is undergoing convulsive change. Technology and economic trends have presented them with new tools of enormous power. Like most institutions, they have not yet fully learned to cope with the new environment, nor to understand and control the new tools. In fact, it could be argued that they are on something of a binge with the tools.

I should like to suggest an agenda of issues for my counterparts in the communications industry to consider, with an eye to repairing the breach.

The first item is the matter simply of making sure that adequate expertise is brought to bear on the complicated matters on which the press must report. One purpose of the new journalism has obviously been to try to make better sense out of the explosive growth of information. But in too many cases it appears that the journalist either has not had the right information, or has not understood the information he has. This not only accounts for some of the clumsy coverage business has received; it accounts

The second agenda item, no less basic than the first, is for the media to answer the question, "What is news?" In part, this is a matter of establishing a clear separation between advocacy and the reporting of events. But there is also the question, "What is an event?"

Thirty years ago, if a scientist conducting experiments on the safety of food products discovered preliminary evidence that a given substance might be hazardous to human health, he would submit his findings to a sci-peers would they be published. And only after they were published could they be considered "news."

Today even the most preliminary research data will be spread across the news media. This is sometimes done before the data have even been interpreted by the investigator himself, much less evaluated by competent people in the field. The result in a number of cases has been alarm approaching panic. It will take a very high level, not only of expertise, but of wisdom and judgment, to determine what is news, and when it is news, in this highly sensitive area.

The third agenda item is the problem of manipulation of the media and the "media event."

Someone has suggested that the future history of the world will consist of nothing but a series of media events strung end-to-end. I don't think it is that bad. But it is fair to ask what the responsibility of the media is to brush aside a "happening" that has obviously been contrived for the press, and to concentrate on "hard," if less dramatic, news.

The fourth agenda item: "Who is an expert?"

Prof. Georges Doriot of the Harvard Business School used to say that "an expert is anybody who is more than 500 miles from home." Under the ground rules of the new journalism it is possible to become an expert without ever leaving your living room. In recent years, anyone with a dramatic or sensational charge to make has had an easy time of it in establishing himself as an expert by media standardsespecially if he talks well on camera.

Of course, the businessman himself has occasionally been known to use doubtful experts and expertise to argue his side of a particular case. The burden obviously lies on the media to develop the wisdom of a Solomon and the knowledge of an Einstein in order decide, on a case-by-case basis, who is telling the truth and who is not. I recognize that that is impossible. But it doesn't make it any less necessary to try. And if perfection is impossible, substantial improvement is

The final item on my proposed agenda: Both sides should take a careful look at the adversary relationship that exists, and will continue to exist, between us.

Winston Churchill once said: "We should be grateful for the opposition. They help us improve our own per-relationship is positive and constructive. But for such relationships to be constructive requires a reasonable degree of agreement on a set of ground rules, which in turn must be based on common assumptions. At present, there is little agreement between the press and the business community in either area. The journalist too often sees the business system as boring at best and dangerous at worst. The businessman sees it not only as challenging and exciting, but as the engine that makes society go.

The businessman believes there should be a presumption that he might be telling the truth in what he says and could even be concerned about the public interest in what he does. The journalist appears to presume that the businessman is guilty until proved innocent, and shows no great inclination to give him his day in court.

To the journalist, freedom of the press is a sacred thing. To the businessman, freedom of enterprise and commerce are no less sacred, as are the trust and public confidence on which they rest. But the central question here is not who is right and who is wrong, but whether we can permit an adversary relationship to lead to confrontation.

If we lose either the freedom of the press or the freedom of the marketplace, there won't be much left for anybody. It won't really matter who is to blame.

James L. Ferguson is chairman and chief executive of the General Foods Corporation, This article is adapted from a speech to the Association of National Advertisers.

De-Obfuscationism

By David Mathews

WASHINGTON - History records that in the earliest days of World War II the following newly promulgated regulation reached the desk of a weary Commander in Chief deliberating the weighty and terrible decisions of that dark time: "Such preparations shall be made as will completely obscure all federal buildings occupied by the federal government during an air raid for any period of time from visibility by reason of internal or external illumination. Such obscuration may be obtained either by blackout construction or by terminating illumination."

Frank:in D. Roosevelt is said to have scrawled a one-sentence rewrite that said, in essence, cover the windows or turn off the lights.

Unfortunately, the regulation-writers of F.D.R.'s era ignored his example and passed their objuscatory talents alone to their successors. But the laughter with which the public once greeted par-Licularly bizarre examples of "governmentese" has been supplanted by a growing irritability, if not resentment.

The attitude has changed as Americans have come increasingly to realize that, to an extent unimaginable in Mr. Roosevelt's day, these nearly undecipherable bits of prose exert an influence over, and effect on, their lives that is anything but humorous. We have, as a nation, let loose a tidal wave of regulations upon ourselves. And these regulations, many inane as well as obscure, carry the full force of law.

The Congress each year passes at least 200 laws, but Federal departments and agencies premulgate some 7,000 regulations and hundreds of thousands of interpretations in the same period. Thus, regulation or interpretation of regulation often affects us more directly than the policy or law itself. Public disquiet arises because the regulations that direct our activities do not provide the public access or control that we have always associated with the legislative process. It can be argued that the bureaucracy has become a fourth branch of government, but with none of the built-in safeguards of the constitutionally mandated three.

The purpose of a good diagnosis is that it should tell us something about the remedy. In this case it may be that looking at the regulatory process with a legislative model in mind suggests where we can turn for some relief. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has developed some new "regulations" for its own regulations that speak to the "legislative" issues in the process.

First, we are opening the process initially to let the public comment on what we might do even before the staff puts pen to paper. Through a Notice of Intent to Regulate, we will lay out the issues in the Federal Register and, we hope, in other more widely read. publications. We are also holding more public hearings, early on, to identify issues that need to be addressed in drafting regulations. And we are contemplating reporting public comments on draft regulations back to the public so that citizen thought is more accessible to other citizens.

Second, our reforms aim at making the process more expeditious and the results more understandable.

Since we send regulations out with a 30-day comment period for the public, we feel similar limits on our own review within the department might also be in order. Moreover, to keep regulations from being anonymous products of the bureaucracy, cluttered with a jargon in which no one can take pride, we are asking writers to sign their inhouse draft regulations. We believe that this step, coupled with training courses. will encourage straight forward simple

H.E.W. is looking at the regulatory process with a legislative model in mind.

English. Third, to avoid the charge that the department has already made up its mind by the time it issues draft regulations, we will be publishing unresolved issues. These will be sufficiently framed so that the public can respond, but will not be subject to the kind of prior departmental resolution that might indeed make changes difficult to accept.

Fourth, regulations, unlike legislative acts, are not open to any automatic process for amendment or repeal. They are arrows shot into the air whose intent is not necessarily measured against results. Where appropriate - and where we can avoid keeping issues in uncertainty --- we have set deadlines for evaluating the effectiveness of some of our newest regulations.

We are not so sanguine as to suggest that these steps alone will solve all the problems associated with regulations. But we proceed with the firm belief that public participation in the process can only improve the end product, and at the same time put the regulations writers back in their proper perspective: as servants, not masters, of the public's legislative will.

specialized products and markets. A major growth area is agricultural chemicals—a broad line of proprietary herbicides, insecticides, fungicides and soil fumigants.

These offer the farmer a good return on his investment by increasing the yields of crops which supply food for America and the world. Agricultural chemicals accounted for more than 17 percent of our total 1975 net sales.

Agricultural chemicals is one of our eight basic chemical business areas. The others are industrial chemicals. 33 percent of sales; international operations, 13 percent; specialty chemicals, 12 percent; plastics, 11 percent; fertilizer and mining, 6 percent; food ingredients, 6 percent, and chemical systems, 2 percent.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. - Two days after my 66-year-old mother arrived in this country from Trinidad this fall, she was relieved of her entire life savings of over $4,000 in a con game by three "brothers" in the Park Slope section of Brooklyn.

Not a large amount by American standards, but for a woman who scrubbed and scraped the kitchen floors of white and black women alike (for about $6 a week in 1956 to about $75 in 1975), saving on the average $10 per month, it was a large amount of money. A life's achievement.

When my mother was pregnant with my sister, I remember her arriving home from work sick, vomiting everything she had eaten, moaning and groaning with pain throughout the night. Yet in the morning she would return to the white woman's kitchen in order to take care of her two small kids and to put a "little something"

Then she arrives in the naked city, where some say there ain't no pitywhere, in the concrete jungle of New York, savages wait to prey upon their victims. Of course, the lucky thing is that she did not die of a heart attack, that she wasn't hurt physically and did not go off her rocker.

Yet, for all we know she will become another statistic in the rolls of unsolved crimes, and will return home to remember only that in one of the most "civilized" and "advanced" societies of the world she was lucky to escape alive.

But, strange to say, I understand the action of my brothers. I feel sympathy for brothers who have been so brutalized that they must prey upon their own in order to eke out an existence, that they use all of their creative energies not to enhance the development of self and society but to bring pain and suffering. I listened to the Presidential debates, read the newspaper, and at once I began to recognize that the whole gaze of the nation is sidetracked, by absurdities, from the real problems of unemployment and the declining social and cultural level of the peoples of the United States of America.

How, we ask specifically, is Jimmy Carter going to solve black unemployment, which stands at 25 percent overall, when a quarter of our people are on welfare and the unemployment of our youths has reached epidemic proportions? What must we do when we realize that one American corporation made over a billion dollars in one quarter, and in the third quarter of 1975 United States corporations made their highest profits since 1950?

Moreover, how do we reconcile this to the economic theses propounded by United States scholars that to the degree that profits rise unemployment should fall? How do we reconcile the fact that we are faced with the spectacle of rising unemployment, rising inflation and rising absurdities in rhetoric? How will we solve the question of walking safely in Detroit or curing black unemployment in New York City?

My mom has to walk the streets of Brooklyn, and other black moms still have to live on welfare. Perhaps, if she has the courage, my mom will begin anew to save her $10 monthly. If she is lucky, in the next forty years or so she will recoup her losses, which is one reason why black folks have always said, "We are born to work from the cradle to the grave."

As for my brothers in the ghetto who will continue to be brutalized, their offspring will see little hope in the idea of the "limits to democracy." The concrete jungles of America will continue to turn brothers' hearts into stone and their sensibilities into animalistic cravings. The naked city will show no pity even unto the third and ourth generation. Beware mothers, when you walk

By ISRAEL SHENKER

C. S. Lewis (1898-1963) was an academic who sought delight in myth, a skeptic who found joy in faith, a writer who gave pleasure with deft word and sorightly image.

He described himself as a dinosaur. a rare survivor of a distant age, whose like would never walk the earth again. Breed apart, he suffered the conse-quences: scholars tracking his dissent, true believers gathering around his bones—avid for relics.

A band of the faithful met yesterday at the Cathedrai Church of St. John the Divine, to hear from one professor who had known Lewis and from another warning against excesses of devo-

The Rev. Dr. Chad Walsh of Beloit College memorialized Lewis's towering ability and uncommon grace. Prof. Thomas Howard of Gordon College recalled Lewis's opposition to "vague slush" posing as religion, but, while exalting the writer, called the cuit of Lewis tiresome.

There are C.S. Lewis societies in almost all 50 states and in about 15 countries. Exegesis proceeds relentlessly. New York's C.S. Lewis Society meets the second Friday of each month and yesterday's grander conference was enough to tip the scales in favor of dinosaurolatry.

Since Lewis wrote not only literary history and Christian apologetics, but also children's books and science fiction, Canon Walter D. Dennis, the conference organizer, asked the audience not only how many had trekked from New Jersey (about 20) and Connecticut (four), but how many had journeyed from other planets. Rescued by World War I, he became British officer and was wounded by a British shell. Back at Oxford he specialized in classics, English and phi-losophy, and eventually became a don. Since he begrudged time spent on students, he never overstayed the 45minute lecture period. He would pro-nounce the last syllables as he strode from the lecture hall, and if he was late arriving he would boom out the first words as he approached. Reading was his refuge, and he recommended to others embracing the printed word not as a labor but as a vice.

At about the age of 14 he had fallen away from Christianity, as he was to write, "with the greatest relief." About 16 years later, pursued by jangling odd-ments of knowledge and recurrent floods of doubt, he returned to faith. "I gave in," he wrote, "and admitted that God was God, and knelt and he began writing witty, lucid books in defense of Christian orthodoxy, delighting in rigors of reason, not empt piety, with no water in the wine but lots of heady bubbles. A British phi-losopher declared that Lewis had "the rare gift of being able to make righteous readable," and Dr. Walsh's ac-count celebrated that gift.

In his own life, Lewis struggled against arrogance, glibness and pride, was impatient of fools, and succumbed to puns without a second thought. Clare Booth Luce, who worked on a movie version of "Screwtape," he called Clare Bootlace, and the Bishop of Woolwich, whose cut-rate popularization of religion Lewis detested, he called the Bishop of Woolworth.

Lewis had little patience with newspapers, progressive education, trendiness or technology. If you want to annihilate space, he advised, creep into

He might have been uncomfortable with tokens of his immortality in the Synod House, where the conference was held-books by and about him, newsletters honoring his memory, paintings illustrating his creations. Lewis would have fled on hearing the questions seeking details of his long devotion to the widowed mother of a wartime friend, and of his endurance when subjected to pleasures of the flesh.

Gerald Cunningham, president of the Metropolitan Taxicab Board of Trade, said yesterday that the fleet owners would begin on Monday to charge each driver 5 cents for each gallon of gasoline used during his shift, unless settlement of a contract dispute was achieved or seemed to be near.

"We are doing this not to make money but to bring the dispute to a head," Mr. Cunningham said.

.Taxl Drivers Union 3036, which represents nearly 20,000 fleet drivers, has not threatened to strike, but Donald Menagh, the local's lawyer, made it clear that the union would resist any attempt to impose the gasoline charge on the drivers' earnings.

"We will advise the drivers that they bave no obligation to have their pockets picked," Mr. Menagh said. "It would be an invasion of the pocketbooks of the

Mediation Chairman Assisting

The fleet owners' proposal was expect ed to spur bargaining over the weekend to avert the possible consequences of a Monday confrontation. Vincent D. McDonnell, chairman of the State Mediation Board, has been assisting the two sides in their efforts to resolve differ ences that relate closely to the cost problems of the fleet owners.

Mr. Cunningham said in an interview that many of the fleets with marginal operations would not be able to continue service unless they obtained relief by the gas-cost pass-through leasing of taxis to drivers or a higher fare. The alternative for many of them, he said, is to sell the medallions—which give them the right to operate—to minifleets of two cabs, or to liquidate their operations.

Although Mr. Cunningham described their becomes a good he said that the taxi business as good, he said that the costs of fleet operators had increased drastically in the last three years. He cited a rise in gasoline costs from 26 cents a gallon to 55 cents. Also, he said, fleet owners at 18 garages recently received cancellation notices from their bonding company, requiring them to go into an assigned risk pool at higher costs if they are to continue operations. In addition, he said, costs of equipment and vehicles have risen sharp-

Drivers' Earning Cited

"We're in a crisis situation in regard to both insurance and gasoline," Mr. Cunningham said.

The fleet owners cite earnings figure for drivers, on the other hand, which show average weekly earnings of $225 a week-up about 30 percent since 1974,

Mr. Menagh said that the union acknowledged that the fleet owners faced increasing costs, but he emhasized that it was a "two-way street" and that drivers and their families were also faced with much higher living expenses.

The union has been seeking contract changes that would give drivers increased earnings and improved pensions and benefits. The proposals are moderate, Mr. Menagh said. He also said the union was seeking a fairer method of dispatching cabs and "more suitable" vehicles for the drivers to operate. Some dissident cab drivers paraded around the World Trade Center yesterwhere the taxi negotiations have been taking place. They said in a state-ment that they wanted a "decent contract and were opposed to leasing, the sale of fleet cabs to minifleets and any layoffs of maintenance workers.

Nursing Strike Put Off

Employees at private nursing homes in the city, who had threatened to strike, agreed to put off a walkout and to continue negotiations. Peter Ottley, president of Local 144 of the Hotel, Hospital and Nursing Home Union, announced the decision following a meeting of delegates of the 14,000 workers at the Diplomat Hotel. The union has been seeking a wage increase and improved fringe bene-fits, but the nursing homes contend that it has been difficult for them to negotiate because of recent cutbacks in Medicaid reimbursements. The union's agreement to continue talking came at the request of Paul Yager, regional director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. He met with Mr. Ottley in the late afternoon and also with representatives of the Metropolitan New York Nursing Home Association, whom he asked to continue operations.

Youth With Long Record Admits Killing Man While Out on Parol

An 18-year-old youth with an extensive criminal record pleaded guilty yesterday to killing a 75-year-old man last March while out on parole on robbery charges.

The murderer, David G. Joyner, had been paroled because the Manhattan District Attorney's office had not prosecuted the robbery charges quickly enough.

The 241 identified by the office of State Comptroller Arthur Levitt represented 0.5 percent of 49,220 cases in which queries had been made about the apparent nonrenewal of vehicle registrations. Nevertheless, the Comptroller's office, State Investigation Commission and Motor Vehicle Department all said that present procedures, using hand-operated stamping machines, involved high potentials for fraud.

Forty-five minutes before closing time yesterday, eight of the Motor Vehicle Department's statewide total of nine auditors descended on the Brooklyn office at 333 Schermerhorn Street. This was to make a sudden inventory of all docu-ments and cash, to be followed up today by three of the 27 departmental investiga-

Security Problems Possible.

Of the $320 million annual fees collected statewide, the Brooklyn office last year produced $20,618,983. A spokesman for State Commissioner James L. Meiton said a preliminary check last month suggested "there may be some security prob-lems" and "conditions so chaotic," that it was decided to make an in-depth audit." Inquiries to Mr. Levitt's office disclosed results of the mail survey. This had sent questions last April 16 on all cases of apparent failure to renew vehicle registrations or driver's licenses during November 1975—a large renewal month and "the month before Christmas, and we figured if there would be any stealing, that would be a month," Thomas Giroux, director of the accounting systems for Mr. Levitt said.

Before this, Commissioner Melton had written to Governor Carey in July 1975 expressing concern over potential losses and thefts, citing 13 counties in particular. The Governor asked the State Commission of Investigation to check, and its chairman, David W. Brown, said yesterday the commission reported back last December that there had been "a substantial loss of money due to inadequate fis-

Utica Mayor Suspends Police Chief and 4 Others

By JOHN T. McQUISTON

Richard A. Hanna, the controversial populist mayor of Utica, N.Y., suspended the city's Chief of Police and four other police officers yester-day when the chief ordered the Mayor and a locksmith arrested for picking the lock of the chief's office at police headquarters.

Mayor Hanna said he had ordered the lock opened to gain access to police records on personnel, pistol permits and prostitution that he said the chief, Benny Rotundo, had refused to show to him or the city Corporation Counsel, Joseph Mascaro.

"The Utica City Charter says the Mayor has the right to examine any city papers or documents at any time," said Mr. Hanna. "What is Chief Rotundo trying to hide?"

The Mayor said that his office had been requesting the papers all week but that the chief was "giving him the runaround." The Mayor con-

"About 10 police officers stood around laughing and refused to get a key to open the door. They said they had called Chief Rotundo, told them not to unlock the door, but to lock me up instead."

The Major said that the locksmith. Donald Zuillioux, had been been "thrown in jail" and charged with third-degree criminal trespass.

"They then tried to fingerprint me and throw me in jail too," the Mayor said, "but City Court Judge Harold Hyme arrived and told the police to cool it."

Judge Hyme had been summoned to the police station by Mr. Mascaro, the Corporation Counsel, who also atempted to reach Chief Rotundo. Judge Hyme ordered those involved in the incident to appear in his courtroom next Thursday.

Mayor Hanna and the locksmith were released by the judge on their own recognizance. Mr. Hanna said that he apparently had also been charged with third-degree criminal trespass, but that he was not certain since he had not received a first male head since 1917. The late Ruth West Campbell, head mistress from 1925 (when the upper school had shrunk to 31 girls) to 1955. school had shrunk to 31 girls) to 1955, and Katherine Zierleyn, who retired to Stamford last year after 20 years as headmistress, presided over a half-century of change and growth for Greenwich Academy. Conducted originally by Congregational clergymen, the academy "did away" with boys in 1914 except for the nursery school, which was conductional until 1963. educational until 1963.

Greenwich Academy for Girls Marking 150th Year

For 52 years Greenwich Academy Parents Inc. has conducted the school, with the trustees elected at the annual parents' meeting. The Rockefeller campus on North Maple Avenue was bought in 1950.

The upper, middle and lower schools and gymnasium building—all built be-tween 1961 and 1971—make up an architecturally forward-looking $3 million day-school plant. But the turn-ofthe century mansion, now used mainly for administrative offices, recalls an earlier Greenwich.

The academy also offers playing fields and a field house, and requires classes, sooner or later, in field hockey, basketball, soccer, volley ball, badminton, padde tennis and lacrosse.

"Everybody here is in sports and gym and dance," Nina Asrican, a senior, said. In its 150th year of liberal arts, the highly structured school keeps the 167 young women of its upper school, in particular, striving away in their pinegreen and vellow uniforms—pursuing the success ethic amid all the beckoning attractions (and distractions) of coedu-cational and experimental schools. Ninety percent of the students live in Greenwich, which has a 3,000-student public high school described as "good" by academy officials, in a region well-supplied with boarding schools. But parents continue to part with day-school tuition of $1,100 for preschool to $3,000 for juniors and seniors-not to mention a good many extras.

Miss Asrican, in her 12th year at the school, pointed out that Greenwich Academy was "once considered a 'feeder school' for Smith College," and also sent many graduates to other "Seven Sisters" women's colleges. The list of schools they enter is more varied now, she said, but "practically everybody" goes on to college.

Marilyn Button, one of two teachers for 35 sixth-graders, said she found the students "talented, creative young

Miss Button is not related to Philander Button, the 1839-67 headmaster, who, on two notable 19th-century occasions, closed the school to allow the students to witness stirring events in Greenwich: In 1848, it was the first passenger train of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway; in 1861, it was the Volunteer Infantry setting out for the Civil War. But Lolly Robinson, an upper-school student, is Philander

Button's great-great-grandniece.
For the upper-school girls, in particular, the absence of boys is only relative. The Brunswick School for boys is nearby. There's an exchange of populations for certain academic classes as well as for parties and athletic events.

"By the time they're ready for it, there's Brunswick," said Garth L. Kauffman, the academy's tweedy, pipesmoking director of development. A school parent and trustee for many years, he joined up full time last July after 14 years as a vice president of Young & Rubicam, the advertising agency. His younger daughter attends the school, as did her older sister. Mrs. Kanffman, the former Barbara Banks, graduated in 1943 in the footsteps of her father and grandmother.

Staff and students alike are eager to dispel the notion of Greenwich Academy as a "lock-up-your-daughters" coccon, insulated from the public-school problems in a mushrooming suburb, where a commuting father can get an elegant education for the apple of his eye and still see her when he's home.

Only about 30 percent of the parents commute to New York City. Nearly all the students say they have friends in the public schools.

But pound for pound, or dollar for dollar, you're going to get more edu-cational value in a 167-girl upper-school," said Mr. Kauffman, even

New Majority Whip of the House

Stephen John Brademas

By DIANE HENRY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9-As the new majority whip in the House of Representatives, Stephen John Brademas is on how the 298 Democrats in the the 298 Democrats in the are likely to vote, noticing those who are wavering, recognizing why and then feeding those members the kind of information that would attract them to the side of the leadership. The role requires some subtle political maneuvers, and Mr. Brademas has quietly established himself as a man with the cleverness to convince people on op-posing sides of an issue that he is working for their interests.

For example, last year Common Cause, a public affairs lobbying organization, reported that "special thanks" were due Mr. Brademas for his effort in the fight to restore power to the Federal Election Commission, at a time the chairman of the House Administration Committee was working to dilute the commission's authority.

Yet, those who closely watched the developments in the long restructuring battle of the commission pointed out that on several occasions Mr. Brademas was acting on behalf of the chairman, then Wayne Hays of Ohio.

A Rhodes Scholar The seeming contradiction is not a characteristic limited to Mr. Brademas's political life. He is a liberal and a Rhodes Scholar who since 1958 has been elected to Congress by the people of the Third District of Indiana, which is heavily blue collar. After service in the Navy, he was a Veterars National Scholar at Harvard where he was graduated magna cum laude in 1949; and as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, he received his doctorate in socia studies in 1954.

He was born March 2, 1927, in fishawaka, Ind., the son of a Greek immigrant, and became the leader of half a dozen Congressmen of Greek ancestry who fought vehemently and successfully in 1974 to pass legislation enforcing a cutoff of military aid against Turkey after the invasion of Against linkey after the invasion of Cyprus.

While he is a Methodist like his mother, he taught political science at Saint Mary's College, a Roman Catholic school at South Bend, Ind.

According to his assistant, James Mooney, Mr. Brademas wants to rearrange the whip's office so that members will be better informed on how late the House is likely to be in session late the House is likely to be in session on a given night. The reason, Mr. Mooney explained, is that the new whip has been concerned that the inability to plan evenings has placed a strain on members' family lives.

However, Mr. Brademas has never been married and in fact is one of this town's most sought-after bachelors, a popular guest at Washington parties who is seldom seen without the company of an attractive woman.

His most noted legislative work has concerned higher education, and he was a principal sponsor of major legislation on the subject in 1972.

Contribution Controversy

The only controversy involving Mr. Brademas arose several weeks ago when he acknowledged the receipt of about $5,000 in campaign contributions in 1970, 1972 and 1974 from Tong Sun Park, the Korean businessman who gave cash contributions allegedly to create a favorable climate in Congress toward South Korea.

Anxious to quell any suspicion of wrongdoing, Mr. Brademas quickly acknowledged the contributions to his campaign and noted that they had all een properly recorded and were legal. In a fact sheet he issued on his rela-tions with Mr. Park. Mr. Brademas stated that he had rented an apartment in the same building as Mr. Park in 1962 and their acquaintance was "pure-ly social." He also listed his votes on him to be a "consistent critic" of the South Korean Government.

Capital Punishment: Confusion Reigns as Law Is in Limbo

By TOM GOLDSTEIN

The future of capital punishment in this country has been left in an uncerfain Embo," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger wrote in June 1972. And so it

.. The Chief Justice of the United States was dissenting to a ruling that found the death penalty as then practiced amounted to cruel and unusual punishment. But the Supreme Court, in its 5-to-4 decision, did not absolutely soutlaw capital punishment.

Legislatures in 35 states responded to the Furman v. Georgia decision by easing new death penalty laws. But last July, the Supreme Court said that nany of those legislatures had simply misread its 1972 decision:

In its latest series of decisions, the harply divided Court upheld capital punishment laws of some states and invalidated those in others, concluding that capital punishment is an extreme sanction, suitable to the most extreme

As it had four years earlier, the court issued a series of decisions that ave left the state legislatures and ower courts confused. This confusion as been multiplied in the last two eeks as the Court has re-entered the eleath penalty controversy by agreeing to review several cases, including por-ations of the laws that it already has applied.

The Background

The controversy over the death penears when colonists count be put of eath for denying the true God or eath for denying the true God or orders and opponents of capital punorters and opponents of capital punorters and opponents of capital punorters and opponents of capital punorters. irs when colonists could be put to hment have done battle, and gradualits application has been curtailed, ut not until the 1950's did the abolionists become an enecute of executions ince then, the number of executions desired des ave dwindled dramatically, and since 967, there have been no gassings, angings, electrocutions or firing

> Now that the Supreme Court has aid that "the punishment of death hes not inevitably violate the Constition, the question is no longer hether executions will resume, but hen they will start again. In the last few months, however, execution dates have been set, postmed, reset and postponed again, the bate over the death penalty has rain focused on whether the state is the right to take a citizen's life. In the way that the case of Caryl lessman, who wrote of his experi-ices on death row, served as the nterpiece of the national debate over pital punishment in the late 1950's, e case of Gary Mark Gilmore, the nfessed Utah murderer who wants be put to death by a firing squad, is now dramatized the debate over e death penalty.

In some intengible way, it appears at while the death penalty is popular in the abstract, it is less so when the time for an execution arrives.

Pros

In its main opinion in July, the Court made much of public opinion.

The Court noted that after its Furman decision Congress and legislatures in nearly three-quarters of the states had come to the view that capital punishment for murder better served the ends of criminal justice than did life imprisonment. Therefore, the Court found, the penalty could not be found excessive in the sense that it serve no legitimate legislative or societal pur-

According to opinion polls, public support for capital punishment has reached its highest point in 25 years— 65 percent of Americans in a Gallup

Poll taken earlier this year. The chief justification given by proponents of the death penalty is that society is entitled to satisfy its moral outrage at offensive conduct. Retribution, they say, is not a forbidden objective of the criminal law, and crimes now he co. helicons that the only ademay be so heinous that the only adequate response may be death.

The Supreme Court accepted this argument. The main opinion, written by Justice Potter Stewart, said: "This function may be unappealing to many, but it is essential in an ordered society that asks its citizens to rely on legal processes rather than self-help to vindicate their wrongs."

The proponents advance a second major social purpose for the death penfenders from committing serious

They contend that killings for hire would be reduced and they point to evidence derived from a highly technical econometric analysis that suggests that the death penalty is a more effective deterrent than is imprisonment. In the June 1974 edition of the American Economic Review, Isaac Ehrlich of the University of Chicago concluded that by leaving all other ele-ments constant during the years since 1930, merely altering the frenquency used would have altered the number

That article has been debated in professional journals, and some doubt has been cast on its reliability. The Supreme Court studied it and in the end discarded it, finding that studies on deterrence have been "inconclusive."

Cons

Just as the advocates argue that the burden of proof for outlawing the death penalty rests with the abolitionists, the abolitionists argue that the burden for resuming execution lies with the advocates a burden that they find has not been met.

Abolitionists have their own deterrence studies to point to. One 1974 study by William J. Bowers, a research sociologist, found no evidence that the nationwide moratorium on executions "contributed to increasing the level of homicide in this country. But, like the advocates, they ultimately rest their case on moral grounds and find it unacceptable for the Govemment deliberately to put some of its members to death. The punishment of death, they argue, like the punishments of the rack, the screw and the wheel, is no longer morally tolerable. They feel that matters of life and death should not depend on national opinion polls. They point approvingly to one of the dissents that Justice Thurgood Marshall cast last July in which he said: "But if the constitutionality of the death penalty turns, as I have urged, on the opinion of an informed citizenty, then evven the enactment of the new death statutes cannot be viewed as conclusive."

The abolitionists further suggest that popular support may be misleading in that the support for the principle of the death penalty may be very differ-ent from those actually favoring exe-

In this regard, they point to the dif-fusion of responsibility created by the death penalty. That argument goes like

The legislatures after assessing public opinion, say, "This is a capital crime." The jury of 12, also representing the community, realizes that few of the persons sentenced to death are ever executed. Anyhow, they know their verdict is not final. It can be reviewed on appeal several times, and the Governor always has the power to commute. But the courts and the Governor say that this is the will of the people—as expressed by the legislature and the jury.

"The result of this process is that at the end somebody's dead, and nobody killed him," Anthony Amsterdam, one of the leading abolitionists, wrote several years and several years ago.

As the state legislatures and courts wrestle with the Supreme Court's latest decisions, the Court will be ruling on veral other death penalty matters. While it has added confusion by re-entering the death penalty controversy in the last two weeks, the Court has also clarified some significant issues.

First, the Justices have indicated they should take a second look before executions take place of condemned people, like Mr. Gilmore or Robert Ex-cell White of Texas, who have expressed the unequivocal desire to die.

Secondly, in what could prove to be an extremely beneficial ruling for abolitionists, the Court said on Monday that if even one potential juror is excluded by a court from a jury in a capital case because of his general doubts about capital punishment, any death sentence that the jury subsequently imposes is

"That means the de facto abolition in New York City," one law enforcement official said yesterday, doubting that any jury panel could be found without personal morally opposed to the death penalty.

In the meantime, abolitionists are mounting other case-by-case legal challenges. Of the more than 400 persons now on death row, most have legal questions in their cases that have not been presented to the courts. Their lawyers are pressing appeals and habeas corpus petitions. These lawyers are making every effort to stop the first execution, fearing that after the first execution, others would be treated as routine. The decision on that execu-tion may well be that of the Supreme

California Gets Death Penalty Bill SACRAMENTO, Calif., Dec. 9 (UPI)-The first of probably many bills seeking to reinstate the death penalty in California was introduced in the legislature yesterday, a day after the State Supreme Court struck down the previous law as unconstitutional. The court unanimously overturned the 1963 law on grounds that it made execution mandatory for certain crimes and did not allow for consideration of mitigating circumstances.

Measles Cases Are Up 64% Over '75 Pace, With Rise Linked to Swine Flu Drive

ATLANTA, Dec. 9 (AP)-Measles cases are up 64 percent so far this year, and a Federal health official said yesterday that he was concerned that next year may be worse at least partly because grams." of the national swine flu immunization sident freed this year from exile in Siberia, came here from his home in The Netherlands to receive last night the Human Rights Award of the International League for Human Rights. Mr. Amalrik and his wife, Gyuzel, left the Soviet Union last July after morethan a decade of participation in a movement on behalf of broader freedom for Soviet citizens. For his erforts he received two terms in Siberia, including exile and detention in a labor camp. Mr. Amalrik, who will give lec-tures at Columbia, Harvard, Yale and other universities while here, expressed a desire yesterday to meet with President-elect Jimmy Carter.

Sixteen-year-old Prince Andrew, second in line to the British throne, was prospect" of going to school at Lake-field College in Ontario. Buckingham Palace announced that starting Jan. 5, the young prince would spend a term or two at the small college. He is now attending Gordonstoun school in Scot-land, as fild his father, Prince Phillip, and his older brother, Prince Charles. Gordonstoun and Lakeland operate a regular student exchange program and their curriculums are similar. Lakeland has about 240 students between the ages of 12 and 18.

During her sold-out, week-long run in Enid Bagnold's play "A Matter of Gravity," at the Spreckels Theater in San Diego this week, Katherine Hepburn is performing in a wheelchair. The 67-year-old actress broke an ankle last month in a fall at her home in Holly-wood Hills, Calif. . . Also alling be-cause of a fall in his home is Jim Jordan, "Fibber McGee" of the old radio series. The 80-year-old Mr. Jordan is in St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, Calif., undergoing treatment for a pos-sible fractured hip. He was admitted Sunday after suffering a fall.

At a Plaza Hotel dinner last night, five persons were awarded the 1976 Gold Medal of the National Institute of Social Sciences. The institute, founded in 1865, has been giving its Gold Medal since 1913. This year's winners are John J. Affirmative Action Helps Women

Harris G. Watts, Boston University's placement coordinator, said that affirmative action programs had "begun to open the lives of a lot of women and minority group members." He added:

I think today's businessmen care less about a graduate's specialized degree and we are seeing more signs of a new philosophy that says, in effect, Give us an individual who can perform and has accomplished things in college and we'll teach him or her our business,"

The College Placement Council in Bethlehem, Penn., reported earlier this week that its annual fall job opportunity survey also disclosed an anticipated 16 per cent increase in the number of jobs that large corporations expected to offer June graduates. It received replies from more than 600 employers on that question.

The council found the largest expected increase in hiring to be among engineer-ing graduates, followed by graduates in the sciences, math and other technical categories.

The council said it expected a rise of 8 per cent in the job offers to non-techni-cal graduates, primarily those with liberal Once again the largest demands were arts degrees. But it noted that the impact for engineers, accountants and business of this increase would be minimal in terms of actual numbers hired, because job offers to liberal arts graduates had dropped so sharply in recent years.

These companies expected to offer starting engineers with bachelor's degrees monthly salaries averaging $1,242, Dr. Endicott said. Graduating accountants could expect starting monthly salaries averaging $1,067 and chemists $1,108, while graduates in economics and finance could look for $943 a month. Again at the bottom, liberal arts graduates could expect year's gradates, though the job market only about $866 a month to begin.

In his survey, Dr. Endicott found that these starting salaries were as much as 70 per cent higher than those for similar jobs 10 years ago.

"But with the cost of living rising between 65 and 70 percent in that period, placement at the University of California, most of this year's graduates who are hired will hardly be keeping up with inflation," he said.

White Couple Reported Attacked On Main Highway Near Salisbury

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Dec. 9 (AP)— Black nationalists have wounded a white couple on a main highway 60 miles from Salisbury in the closest attack to the Rhodesian capital in four years of guerrilla warfare, security force neadquarters said

The report said the couple's car was hit by machine-gun fire at dusk last night on the main highway between Salisbury and the garrison town of Bindura, 65 miles northeast of here. Basil Mullon, 52 years old, and his wife, Marion, 49, were treated in a hospital for bullet wounds. Other passengers in the car were unhurt, the security report said.

The police have warned motorists to check with the police post at Mazoe, 22 miles northeast of Salisbury, before traveling after dark on the Salisbury-Bin-

Jurors Re-examine Defense Contention Of Brontman Hoax

WHITE PLAINS, Dec. 9 (AP)-Jurors now deliberating in the trial of two men accused of having kidnapped Samuel Bronfman 2d re-examined more evidence today, apparently trying to analyze a defense contention that the abduction was a hoax.

Bronfman 2d re-examined more evidence the huge Bronx project.

The civil-rights group had made the charges through its Open Housing Center. On Sept. 9 the center's director, Betty

At the jury's request, a court reporter reread testimony by Mel Patrick Lynch, one of the defendants, that he had tried to talk Mr. Bronfman out of going through with the hoax.

On Sept. 5 the center's director, Betty Hoeber, sent a letter to Governor Carey asking his "immediate intervention to halt" the alleged discrimination.

But subsequently, in a letter made public by the Co-op City leaders yesterday, one of Mrs. Hoeber's superiors at the libral lessure conceded that her alleges.

-Pregnancy Sick Benefits: Call for Action on Court Ruling - L

"We bombed out in court, so we'll have to go to Congress," said Kathleen Peratis of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Angered and somewhat baffled by the Supreme Court ruling on Tuesday that private employers may refuse to compensate women for work absences caused by pregnancy, the American Civil Liberties Union and various women's groups and union representatives will meet in Philadelphia next Tuesday to plan a major lobbying effort for a national law that would require such compensa-

"There has been a sudden flash of recognition among people who had not expected this decision that a law is the only way to guarantee these benefits," Miss Peratis said. "I think the prospects are good now that the Court has ruled, because the ruling is simply not fair and it's bad public

The Court's 6 to 3 decision rejected the finding of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission that exclusion of pregnancy from workers' compensation plans violated Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The decision, which involved the General Electric Company, shocked women's organizations that had been basing their fight for benefits on the opportunity commission's interpretation of

"We had not pushed hard enough for state or national legislation," said Noreen Connell of Women Office Workers. "We were waiting to see what the Supreme Court would do. And since we had won in six appeals cases, we thought sure the decision would not exclude pregnancy from the list of disabilities.

"I think this is what you would expect from an all-male Supreme Court," Miss Connell said. "The court has simply narrowed the definition of sex discrimination and brought it down to pregnant

"Sex discrimination is money," Miss Connell said. "The companies are concerned mainly about what they think it will cost to continue to pay women who are on leave to have babies. I don't think they trust women workers; they say that wom-en will go on disability and then quit. Their biggest claim is that pregnancy is voluntary and thus shouldn't be covered. But that's a false issue."

That pregnancy is voluntary, that it is a unique condition, is a central argument of those who oppose classifying it as a disability. The Supreme Court ruled in essence that refusal to cover pregnancy was a refusal to cover a special condition rather than a refusal to cover people

Richard D. Godown, general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers, which has lobbied strongly against giving workers pregnancy benefits, said, "Pregnancy in this day and age is voluntary. It's a little more predictable than a broken arm.

"We applaud the Court's decision," Mr. Godown said, "because there is only so much disability money available and if a big chunk of it goes to cover pregnant workers, there will be less for the other disabilities."

'I think the issue is what this will mean to women wanting to enter the work force," said Marilyn Brook, a licensed workmen's compensation representative in New York: "The fact that they may not be able to get the benefits if they are pregnant may discourage them from working don't think pregnancy ... is disabling for every woman," she added. "Some want to work right up until they have the baby and return to work soon after. But I think that if a woman's doctor certifies that in her case the pregnancy is disabling then she should be entitled to com-

Of the five states that have mandatory disability plans, New York excludes disability benefits for pregnancy. Miss Brook said that the Court decision would make her work harder "because I have had to depend on the liberal interpretation of the equal opportunity commission's

Carole DeSaram, president of the New York Chapter of the National Organization for Women, said, "We're serving notice on all corporations that presently have pregnan-cy benefits that if they drop those benefits because of the Court deci-sion or in any way harass women we will boycott products, forse public disclosure of their LEC reports and demonstrate out their offices. # Sex Bias Is Charged At Job-Rule Hearings

In testimony presented in four days of hearings that concluded in New York City yesterday, women's and civil rights organizations protested proposed changes in Equal Employment Opportunity regulations for Federal contractors. Officials of the United States Department of Labor have said that the revisions would cut red tape and enable it to concentrate on larger employers. Many of the groups who oppose the new proposals see the changes as cutting back on the number of contractors covered by the regulations

Joanne Hayes of the League of Women Voters called the proposed regulations "akin to laissez taire." Gloria Parker of the National Urban League said they were "dangerously regressive and represent an overc move to sabotage more than a decade of progress.

"It is important that all businesses, no matter how large or small, go through an affirmative action planthing process," said Clare Garrity m a statement she presented for Jane Culbreth, national president of the Business and Professional Women's

Dr. Edith J. Tebo, the New York regional Coordinator of Federally Employed Women, said the organizations opposed some proposed changes but had no objection to increasing the requirement for a written affirmative action plan to companies with 100 employees, which eliminates some companies required to have plans now.

"We know better than most limited the resources for equal opportunity enforcement are," Dr. Tebo-said. "You can't prepare a meaningful affirmative action plan for 50. I wouldn't want to do it for 100. We feel resources should be spent where it can do the most good.'

The most contested of the proposed changes would require a writ-ten affirmative action plan for employers who have 100 employes or more and a contract of $100,000 or more. Currently a written plan is required for those who employ 50 people and have contracts of $50,000. Only contractors with $10 million contracts, as opposed to the current $1 million, would be subject to a review, before receiving a Federal contract. The review would determine if the employer was in compliance with Federal regulations. No review would be required if the employer had undergone one within the previous two years; under present regulations, the figure is one year. Several suggested guidelines that an employer could follow would no longer be listed in the regulations and time limits for reviewing companies would be ex-

Hearings, were also held in Atlanta, and will continue next week in Chicago and Los Angeles.

On Monday, Women Office Workers, known as WOW, held a rally at 1515 Broadway, site of the hearings and collected signatures for petitions to President-elect Jimmy Carter's policy planning committee. On Tues-day WOW organized a news conference led by Representative Bella Abzug who, before testifying, urged that the proposals be withdrawn until after Mr. Carter takes office.

Understands Reservations

Robert Hobson, associate director of the Labor Department's office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, who was present for part of the hearings, said he could under-stand some of the misgivings about the changes.

"If I were not associated with the program I would have the same perception," he said.

Mr. Hobson added, however, that from his experience, an employer could follow guidelines and still not achieve what he called "bottom-line results—promoting and hiring wom-en and members of minorities groups. "The sheer number of actions tends to divert action from the items that really count," he said. Mr. Hobson said that, as an example, one suggested guideline was that when employes are pictured in consumer or help-wanted advertising, minority group representatitives and women should be included. He said one suggestion was that such a guideline could be included in a pamphlet, but that making it a regulation was not necessary.

proposals, said he believed the good points lay not so much in cutting red tape as in emphasis on eliminating discrimination of longtime employes who had been put in dead-end jobs, and in getting relief in the form of back pay, which he said was an aggressive stance for the department

Time limits for reviewing contract awards now were so short, he said, that the review tended to be based on goals and timetables, which favored new employes and future hiring.

"The Government at this very moment is making awards almost exclusively on basis of goals and time-tables and awards may be going to contractors who practice systematic discrimination," he said.

The regulations were written and amended over the years to imple-ment an Executive Order by President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1965 prohibiting discrimination by Federal contractors or subcontractors on grounds of race, color, religion or national origin. In 1968 an amend-ment included sex in the order.

This is the largest revision of the regulations proposed so far.

PARENTS/CHILDREN

Exploring Those Disturbing After-the-Baby Blues

By RICHARD FLASTE

Sometimes the people who might look as though they'd make the best parents because they're so full of educated know-how are the saddest after the baby is born. They come down with the disturbing "baby blues," and the melancholy quiet is only broken by the baby's crying or the mother's.
The baby blues are said to strike a great many mothers and some fathers, but how blue one gets and how long the sadness lasts varies widely. Question sarise about what causes itemotions? hormones?—about how to handle it and about when it crosses the boundary of normal unhappiness and enters the realm of severe disorder.

Anna Katz Brenner, a Manhattan psychotherapist who runs a program called Check-Up for Emotional Health that frequently deals with postpartum depression, observes that her clients often seem to have put too much pressure on themselves: they know so much, they intend to be so competent.

She recalls a woman who taught nursery school, was proud of her abil-ity with children and then was shaken the roots when she had her own child. She could not handle every situation that crose with the intelligence she thought she should muster, and her fragile self-esteem was shattered. The woman sought relief in therapy.

In cases that are even more painful, postpartum depression has been known to lead to hospitalization of mothers and to suicide attempts. The potential of childbirth to precipitate mental disorders has been substantiated by researchers who note an increase in such disorders in the first year after preg-

Most people do not experience any-thing nearly so terrible. Depending on how emotionally prepared to have a baby the parents were and how firm their feelings about themselves are, the specialists say, baby blues is usually a transitory period of melancholy that may come in the form of waves of What causes it is not known for certain. Dr. Myrna M. Weissman, a Yale University psychiatrist, said that so far, there is no proof that hormonal changes at the time of childbirth play a role, though she did not rule out that possibility. One thing is sure, Dr. Weissman said: Postpartum blues do exist.

Unlike depression associated with menstruation, for which researchers have found little consistent proof sadness after having a baby does come with provable regularity. It is so reg-ular, Dr. Weissman said, "that it's to be considered normal."

Dr. Gideon G. Panter, an obstetrician who wrote "Now That You've Had Your Baby, Do You Know (McKay, $9.95), speculated the other day that often the blues might be a matter of "mourning for the death of the old you, the person you used to be, the happy-go-lucky career woman. It passes, he said, as the baby is put into perspective, and as "you realize that you're basically the same per-son who knows how to have a good time, knows how to relate to your spouse, and you have the same ability to relate to a career of their wives and grieve for them-selves, longing for that carefree fellow who did not have to provide for a child's future.

Others who have looked into the subject conjecture that a father often suf-fers because he feels he has lost his place in the sun to the new child. Some authorities point to the increased desire of fathers to do some traditional mothering chores. This, then, makes a man vulnerable to the same anxieties that a woman feels over ability to handle the baby less than he expected to, and is angrier with the child than he thought he would be. These parents, psychiatrists say, are more likely to be hard on themselves for harboring such feelings or because they have exhausted themselves and are afraid they are not up to the job. Getting them to discuss the anger and fear openly is a frequent goal of thera-Paradoxically, Mrs. Brenner, the psychotherapist, blamss some of the melancholy on the enormous childbirtheducation movement, which, she says, concentrates too often "on the performance, the act of giving birth, with too little preparation for what happens after the birth."

How does one know that the sadness is normal and not some serious problem? Dr. Tibor Farkas, a research psychiatrist at Columbia University, outlined the severer symptoms: The depression persists for at least two weeks; it disturbs sleep, appetite is diminished; there is a sense of hope-lessness and helplessness, perhaps a wish to die, or that the child had never been born.

It becomes, Dr. Farkas said, a situation obvious to everyone—the husband, relatives, the baby sitter; everybody knows something is wrong." Such a severe reaction to childbirth, he said, is the result of underlying problems that were there previously and were set off by the coming of the baby, and therapy should be sought.

The Prerogative of Melancholy

But as for the minor blues, is there any way to shake it? Dr. Farkas suggests that it helps to realize that the sachess is in all likelihood temporary. And although depression is often said to be remedied by "getting out and having a good time," that is not Dr. Farkas's prescription for the baby

When someone feels "even dightly depressed." he said. "the worst thing is to go out with cheerful people; you feel even worse." It would be better, he said, to try to diminish some of the stress in the house and allow yourself the right to melancholy.
Incidentally, if there has been sadness think they have escaped the bacy blues. here is a suitably depressing note.

Dr. Charles J. Rabiner, chairman of the psychiatry department at the Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center, offers the observation that, although he cannot really explain it, baby blues seems to strike more frequently after a second child than after the first.

Rewards for Fast Renovator

Jack Rosenthal acts fast. He heard on a Tuesday in August that a group of six buildings west of First Avenue between 64th and 65th Streets were for sale, and he signed a purchase contract on Thursday.

Mr. Rosenthal is a renovator of Manhattan buildings. Most recently he finished 56 apartments in a former factory and loft building at 155 East 23d Street. It is an 1890 structure with a cast iron facade. He restored it to its earlier splendor by eliminating the faceless stucco exterior created in a 1940's conversion that left the lower floors for a furniture store.

Within two weeks Mr. Rosenthal's apartments were fully rented, at $120 a room per month.

The 64th Street conversion will be the largest of any of the 22 projects he has undertaken since he began his building-by-building approach in 1961.

There will be 158 apartments. The buildings will be consolidated into two, to be joined by a bridge enclosed in glazed glass running over a sunken garden. The offices of Maxwell's Plum, the First Avenue restaurant, are in one of the buildings now; they will be re-es-tablished in one of the renovated buildings.

For experienced renovators, the demand for apartments has rarely been stronger. Stephen B. Jacobs, the archistronger stephen is account the country, says that the Manhattan market is stronger than in any urban center he

Even in this strong market, however, permanent mortgages are not easy for a builder to come by. Lenders are cautious in face of the large number of foreclosures and defaults on existing loans and the city's history of controls on rents and other policies that discourage investment opposes him.

Nevertheless, efforts will be made in the Legislature next year to extend the authorization under which the city has enacted the J-51 tax incentives for the rehabilitation of major buildings. The law permits a 12-year exemption from an increase in assessed valuation attributable to the "reasonable cost" of the renovation. There is also an abatement of the rest of the tax, for 9 to 20 years, up to 90 percent of the reasonable cost of the work.

In Mr. Rosenthal's case, the builder was willing to proceed with the major East Side project with only a standby mortgage commitment, rather than a commitment for the permanent loan. That is a risk that builders do not like

On U.S. Housing Stimuli

Traditionally, housing has been a useful instrument of national economic policy, a way by which the Government, merely by-turning certain moneymarket valves, could provide a "quick fix" of stimulus to construction activity, and hence employment. Accordingone of the proposals that is being put forward to President-elect Jimmy Carter is to pump an additional $2 bil-lion to $5 billion into the economy for mortgages as low as 7½ percent on multifamily housing.

A similar step has been taken already by President Ford, with the effect in the city, that some new apartment buildings are likely to go into production next year.

One problem with using multifamily housing for a "quick fix" is that there is nothing quick about it. Proposals must wend their slow way through the Federal Housing Administration to get the mortgage insurance that goes with the below-market-rate loan.

Although no formal proposals have come forward so far, there are indications that urban spokesmen in search of a housing program to urge upon Mr. Carter may lay stress upon a broadened system of a Federally insured loan. This idea emerged in a report in October to the Mayor's policy committee by its housing-policy task force, headed by the chairman of the City Planning Commission, Victor Marrero, Mayor Beame has yet to decide on his specific recommendations.

The report urges a mortgage guarantee program in specified neighborhoods to cover both refinancing and rehabilitation. The dollar amount of the guarantees are supported by the second s antee would not exceed 60 percent of the locally approved fair-market price of the property.

The report also urges changes in the community development program, currently used as a "grab bag, emergency and in the Section 8 program of housing for low-income people to permit subsidies to flow to specific buildings, rather than to tenants. The latter policy would permit an economic mix of tenants in moderately rehabilitated buildings.

Commissioners Are Satisfied So Far. But Apprehensive on Future

By RICHARD SEVERO

Martin Lang, the Commissioner of Parks and Recreation, was considering the other day how his department had dealth with New York City's continuing fiscal crisis.

As he leaned forward in his chair, he contemplated his achievements like a general who had lost his tanks and his air force, but had somehow managed to win the day using only foot soldiers with bayonets.

"The city will emerge from this lean-er, tougher, more efficient," he said. Asked if he felt all the fat had been removed from a department that was once considered an eternal wellspring of political largesse—especially in the way it provided summer jobs—Mr. Lang replied: "We have taken off the fat and we are into the muscle and

partment of Water Resources-they have won a few and they have lost

But with the city's financial straits more evocative of Dickens's London than of the Athens of Pericles, the commissioners view the future with satisfaction at what they have done-and with apprehension at what they might not be able to do.

Fearful on Priorities

When New York's fiscal problems reached the critical stage two years ago, people concerned about its parks and environment, which are really extensions of its cultural life, were fearful that in a system of such vital priorities as police, fire and sanitation services, the environment would really suffer. It has not worked out that way. Some problems have been solved with so much style that officials wonder why they did not take more efficient approaches sooner, and other problems are being contained by what appears to be the finger-in-the-dike approach—adequate for now but not forever. And still other problems are going completely untended, promising to grow into major, if not downright dangerous, civio woes in years to come. "There has been a new orientation toward finding sources of revenue rather than just spending." said Judith Dwoskin, executive director of the Scientists Committee for Public Information, a New York environmental group. "This is resulting in environmental programs that are sounder fiscally, but I'm still worried about what's going to happen in the future."

So is Mr. Lang, who took over as Parks Commissioner last January, and regarded his agency as "an organism that was decaying but still kept the trappings of its past glory." The city's parks occupy more than 10 percent of its land area. There are 700 play-grounds, 527 tennis courts, 12 huge swimming pools and 17 miles of beach.

Trouble in Brooklyn But as Mr. Lang points out, in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brook-lyn, the playgrounds "glitter with broken glass," the parks are filled with broken benches, the swimming pools have become a plumber's nightmare and tennis players complain about the condition of the courts. The beaches were quite dirty at the beginning of the summer, but Mr. Lang used more of the limited manpower at his disposal and said they were acceptable later in the season. He is determined that they be kept clean. "The beaches," he said, "are what distinguish us from Bridgeport."

When he took office, Mr. Lang's capital budget—the budget he uses for major rehabilitation work-was down to $5 million, a $19 million cut from 1974-75. He knew he had to break with the expansionist tradition of many of his successors and concentrate on saving what he already had.

"I am not talking about saving a grand view," he said. "I am talking about fixing floors, doors, windows, toilets, pavement, wiring, heating and ventilation. We are not engaged in the talking and a particular to the same of the same and the same are the rhetoric. We are saying we want to repair the comfort stations in Conev

One of his first moves was to meet with Victor Gotbaum, head of District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employ-ees. They worked out an agreement whereby the city would take on about 2,000 "park preservators"-unpaid volunteers-for varying lengths of time. sometimes only a day, during the sum-

In return, Mr. Gotbaum was assured that there would be no further layoffs of his men. More than 700 of them had already been let go. For those remaining, a plan was worked out so that Mr. Gotbaum's members would do some of the things that had previously been done by outside contractors, like repairing park benches and pruning and planting trees. Both Mr. Lang and Mr. Gotbaum are pleased at the results and this program will continue and be

$9.5 Million Federal Grant

The budget permitted some summer hiring. About 2,700 people were hired, with the emphasis on part-time and weekend workers. It contrasted sharply with the old practices, which saw 6,000 or more summer workers added, many of them young people who were friends of friends of politicians.

The cutback created problems for foremen and Mr. Lang decided the best way to get them to appreciate the need for trims was to give them more responsibility.

Thus, on a trial basis foremen of three park districts in Brooklyn, Staten Island and Manhattan were given power to make major management decisions on the limited resources available to them. It was just a pilot project and the decision has not yet been made as to whether it should be extended to the entire system, but Mr. Lang regards it as a success, saying that the foremen managed to hold the line." Mayor Beame is also impressed. "For the first time," he said, "we have Parks Department workers watching over ex-penditures as though they were part of their own family budgets."

Mr. Lang also got help from the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, which agreed to grant $9.5 million to the city for park improvement over an 18-month period, provided the city could match the grant. The city did—by recycling at least $5.3 million of Federal Community Development money, and mixing in city money as needed. Mr. Lang admitted that he got the Community Development money when he "scuffled and clawed over the bloody backs" of other city agencies trying to get the same funds.

Of all the city's environmentally related agencies, perhaps the Department of Air Resources is facing the most austere fiscal problems, as well as a deteriorating relationship with the

A Building Is Salvaged

One example of efforts to rehabilitate the New York City park system is the newly refurbished recreation building in Flushing Memorial Park, Queens. It was badly damaged by a fire that apparently had been set by vandals.

The department, using its own man-power, spent about $15,000 to fix the roof, repaint, plaster and rewires. The one-story stone and brick structure now houses a programs for the elderly and preschool children and is used on weekends by a neighborhood athletic organization. In addition, the

"The more we use it, the less chance there is of vandalism," he said.

auxiliary police also plan to establish state's Department of Environmental Conservation.

The city used to receive $1 million a year in Federal money for its air-pol-lution control and research. But when the city cut its manpower and budget in this area, the Federal money was withdrawn as mandated by law. However, the Federal Environmental Protection Agency did not want to cut off funds to a city with air problems as bad as New York's, and decided to give the $1 million to the state's De-partment of Environmental Conservation, with the understanding that the money be used for New York City.

To date, the state has given no money to the city and has indicated that when it does come, $100,000 will be withheld so that the state can provide certain services and equipment it feels the city should have. Some city officials regard this as the first step in the state's trying to take over a city agency; others simply call it "skimming." Whatever it is, First Deputy Mayor John E. Zuccotti made it clear he did not approve of it in a letter sent Oct. 8 to Robert J. Morgado, director of state operations:

Mr. Morgado replied on Oct. 28, explaining the delay had been due mostly to the city's failure "to submit an adequate program description and approvable scope of work in a timely manner." Commissioner Eldon says the state is asking for information never asked for by the Federal Government. And with his staff down to 287 (he once had 425), he says his department needs more time to compile data. Moreover, because he has not received any money from the state, he faces the possibility of having to terminate more people.

"I don't believe this represents state policy." Mr. Eldon said. "It is just a bureaucratic foul-up within the D.E.C." He blames the same bureaucracy for preventing the city from establishing 45 new carbon-monoxide-monitoring stations. Mr. Eldon said in the spring of 1975 that the Bureau of the Budget had already approved the cit of the estimated $770,000, and hoped to have the monitoring. installed by July of 1976.

But, he said, the state felt th 10 monitoring stations were nee of them in Manhattan south Street. Mr. Eldon agreed they serious problems in this particity, but felt the data would by telling if his staff could determ quality in other areas as well Tr disagreed and not a single inch has been made.

Mr. Eldon fears that the state has placed the entire program i Bruy.

As for the Department of Wa sources, Commissioner Sa thinks that, overall, the city's system "is in better shape toda it was 1969," although he conced there are areas that bode ill iuture.

For example, Mr. Samowitz sa the valves in the water delivery preventive maintenance. At predepartment is unable to provi and replaces them only when the found to be malfunctioning

There are about 500 water breaks in New York City ever-If valves are inoperative in a neighborhood, the city must the back to those that do work. This that much larger areas may be do Revenue Generated

But elsewhere, there are brigh in the department. Among the re generating steps it has taken is aericl maps to locate about backverd swimming pools, m them in Queens and Staten Islam the city did not know about charges to newly discovered capers have yielded around $7 Mr. Samowitz has also sent spectors to locate an estimater of 20,000 coin-operated laundr chines in apartment buildings chines not in city records. The other measures have precluded posed $6.1 million cut in the 1

ment of Water Resources budget In addition, Mr. Samowitz, lik commissioners, is increasing the tivity by changing schedules, dr. personnel from portions of the that are not absolutely essenti streamlining the cleaning of basins.

In 1969, around 5,300 catch needed cleaning at any one tim figure has now been reduced to To cut down on the 25.000 r race each year to the city's I fire hydrants (most of the repairs on the same hydrants, over and again), the Department of Wat sources is now using stainless caps that resist the Stillson wre used by vandals.

"It isn't all bad," Mr. Samowit "We would have done a lot o onyhow.".

FRIEDGOOD CASE RESTS WITHOUT HIS TESTIFYING

MINEOLA, L.I., Dec. 9 (UPI)-The defense rested its case this morning without calling Dr. Charles E. Friedgood to testify at his trial for the alleged murder of his wife, Sophie.

The decision was somewhat surprising, because the defense counsel, John J. Sutter, had said in his opening statement that Dr. Friedgood would testify in his own behalf.

The Long Island physician is charged with giving his wife a fatal injection of a pain-killing drug in June 1975. Outside court, Mr. Sutter said, "Neither the doctor nor I saw any necessity for him to take the stand." Seymour Adelman, a Great Neck, L.L. awyer, appeared as the final witness for he defense, but Judge Richard C. Delin refused to allow his testimony in the trial in Nassau County court.

Mr. Sutter asked Mr. Adelman, a personal friend of the Friedgoods, if he was present in April 1975 when Dr. and Mrs. Dr. and Mrs. Cook. Friedgood had a meeting with their daughter, Beth, and her husband, Dr. Jack and angrily objected to the question, and Cook in the family's Kensington, I.I. Judge Delin, after a conference with the

Dave Anderson

The Jets' Owners Should Sell

Perhaps now the Jets' owners will realize that they are the real problem - not the coach, not the players-Perhaps now the Jets' owners will do what they should have done years ago - self the club to owners who will create a winning organization. Usually the owners discharge a coach, but yesterday Lou Holtz in effect discharged the owners. He decided that he would rather coach college football, probably at the University of Arkanas, than pro football—an embarrassing kick in the shins for the owners of a National Football League team. With the Jets, losing isn't everything, it's the only thing. Some people will accuse Lou Holtz of not honoring his "commitment" to the Jets, meaning the remaining four seasons of his five-year contract. But if his heart were not in it, his commitment would not have been worth much. His heart apparently is in college coaching. That can be a noble occupation. Don't complain about Lou Hoitz not honoring his commitment. The essence of his resignation is that the Jets' owners have not honored their commitment to the pro football public and to pro football itself.

For the seventh consecutive season, the Jets have not had a winning record. In that time they attained a .500 record only twice, each with a 7-7 mark. Beginning in 1970, their records have been 4-10, 6-8, 7-7, 4-10, 7-7, 3-11 and 3-10 entering Sunday's season finale with the Cincinnati Bengals at Shea Stadium.

Over the same seven seasons, only four other N.F.L. teams (not including this year's expansion teams in Seattle and Tampa Bay) have not had a winning record—the Chicago Bears, Philadelphia Eagles, San Diego Chargers and the New 9-5 in 1970 and 8-6 in 1972: But there is no protection for the fans of teams that lose consistently. There should be. The ultimate responsibility for a losing team lies with the owners.

The Five-Year Rule

H a N.F.L. team does not produce a winning record for five consecutive seasons, the owners should be required to self the franchise. With a 14-game schedule, eight victories equal a winning record. That's the least the owners should be expected to provide over a five-year span. And when a team is good enough to win eight games, it often will win that many or more the following season. If a team cannot win eight games once over five years, the owners don't deserve to remain. Coaches and players who do not win are not tolerated why should owners be exempt?

Under a five-year rule, the Jets' owners would have been required to sell after the 1973 season and the Giants would be facing a fifth consecutive nonwinning season next year with Wellington Mara facing the sale of the family franchise. But such a five-year rule will probably never be inserted in the N.F.L. constitution because the owners themselves would have to approve it. If a team does not produce a winning record for seven seasons, such as the Jets, the coach is long gone. The transition on the Jets will have Involved Weeb Ewbank, Charley Winner, Lou Holtz and the next coach, possibly Bill Waish, now the Chargers' offensive coordinator, or Walt Michaels, the Jets' defensive coordinator. But if the owners do not create an organization with a winning record, they're permitted to stumble along.

Phil Iselin, Leon Hess, Townsend Martin and Helen Dillon are friendly, pleasant people. But they have let the Jets disintegrate ever since the purge of Sonny Werblin prior to the True, the Jets won the Super Bowl that first year of the new regime, but that was the result of what Sonny Werblin had created. After that, the new owners permitted Weeb Ewbank, then the general manager as well as the coach, to alienate other players in salary negotiations while they basked in Joe Namath's glory as the N.F.L.'s highest-paid performer. They then permitted Weeb Ewbank to hire Charley Winner as his successor as coach. But last season Charley Winner was discharged and Lou Holtz was hired. Now they must seek another coach—another delay in the reconstruction that the organization requires. They also must solve the problem of what to do with Joe Namath, a problem they could have averted by trading him after the 1974 season or surely after last season.

Ultimate Responsibility

The shame is that Lou Holtz might have emerged as a successful coach in the N.F.L. if his heart were in it. But the owners had created an atmosphere that wounded his heart. "Winning and losing is not as important in the pros as it is in college," Lou Holtz said. "With their big salaries and with their endorsements, it's a different world."

That's not true on the Pittsburgh Steelers or the Dallas Cowboys or the Minnesota Vikings or the Baltimore Colts or the Oakland Raiders or the Los Angeles Rams-the N.F.L. organizations that have produced winning seasons consistently. It was not true on the Miami Dolphins or the Green Bay Packers when they were winning. But it is true on the Jets, as it is on any losing team. And the Jets' owners must accept the ultimate responsibility. A! Ward, the general manager, also must accept the responsibility for having misjudged Lou Holtz's potential as an N.F.L. coach. After an intensive search. Al Ward recommended Lou Holtz and the owners approved. But then Lou Holtz also misjudged the Jets' owners. When he was introduced as the new coach last winter, he was asked about the owners.

"Everything that I heard about the owners in the past has been very, very exciting," Lou Holtz said. "They're fair, they're honest and they want to win."

At the time a listener was tempted to ask Lou Holtz what could possibly be "very, very exciting" about the Jets' owners. But the listener thought that Lou Holtz presumably would find out for himself that virtually nothing has been 'very, very exciting" about the Jets' owners. Especially the organization they have created.

And now that Lou Holtz has discovered what the Jets' owners are really like, he's leaving. Just like the season-ticketholders are.

Braves Trade 5 Players For Rangers' Burroughs

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9-One telephone call made George Scott happy late last night and another made Jeff Burroughs unhappy early today. The call to Burroughs made him an Atlanta Brave; the one to Scott secured his fu-ture as a member of the Boston Red

The Texas Rangers traded Burroughs, the American League's most valuable player of 1974, to the Braves for five players and $200,000. Burroughs had believed he never would be traded and was shocked to learn that he had been.

Scott, whom the Red Sox reacquired from the Milwaukee Brewers last Monday, stood on the verge of canceling that deal until he received a call late last night in which he learned the Red Sox were willing to give him a three-year contract worth about $790,000.

The Mets, who worked out a threeteam deal yesterday that will bring them a little-known outfielder named Sheldon Mallory from Kansas City, put together a three-man deal with St Louis today at the baseball owners'

The Mets sent Leon Brown, an outfielder, and Brock Pemberton, first baseman, to the Cardinals for Ed Kurpiel, an outfielder-first baseman. All three players were immediately as-signed to minor league clubs.

Kurpiel, a 22-year-old resident of Hollis, Queens, batted 280 for Tulsa and 262 for Salt lake City last season. He was a New York City schoolboy star at Archbishop Molloy High.

While these big names were being traded, even bigger names were being mentioned in the lobby of the Hilton

Since the Rangers fortified their stock of pitchers with three more from the Braves, there was speculation that they would try to entice the San Fran-cisco Giants to send them Bobby Murcer for some of that pitching.

2 Pirates Are Eyed The Chicago White Sox were trying to get Richie Zisk from Pittsburgh, and several clubs were pursuing another Pirate outfielder, Al Óliver. As the days of the winter meetings dwindled, it became more and more unlikely that the Yankees and Mets would engineer any dramatic deals.

The numerically lopsided deal between Atlanta and Texas was one of the most dramatic moves of the meetings. It totally stunned Burroughs, for whom the Braves gave the Rangers Carl Morton, Rogelio Moret and Adrian Devine, all pitchers; and Ken Henderson and Dave May, outfielders.

"Jeff was close friends with Brad Corbett (Ranger owner) and he understood that he would never be traded," Ted Turner, the eccentric Atlanta

Wish for Return to College Football Cited-Will Leave for Arkansas to Accept Post

By GERALD ESKENAZI

HEMPSTEAD, L. I. Dec. 9-Lou Holtz, the rookie coach of the New York Jets, resigned today and walked away from a five-year contract believed to be worth more than $80,00 a year. Only yesterday the emotional 39year-old coach had been talked into staying by the club's president, Phil Iselin, and Holtz announced he would remain to "honor his commitment to the Jets.'

But he explained today that he wanted to return to college football, even though he contended no job offers had been made. However, it is understood he will leave for Fayetteville, Ark., tomorrow or Saturday to take the coaching job at the University of Arkansas, which pays $50,000 a year on a five-year contract. His friend of a dozen years, Frank Broyles, resigned recently as coach at the school but remains there as athletic director.

"God did not put Lou Holtz on this earth to coach pro football," Holtz said in announcing his resignation.

Losing, Winter Unpleasant

"Winning and losing means more in college," he said. "When you lose in the pros, the professional athlete still has his salary and his outside endorse-

And he did not like the New York winters. When he arrived at the training-camp complex this morning on the grounds of Hofstra University, the temperature was 17 degrees. Once inside, he kept his sweater on. He even had worn a sweater on the practice field in August.

Holtz will not finish the season with the Jets, a season that ends Sunday at Shea Stadium with a game against the Cincinnati Bengals. When Holtz told Al Ward, the general manager, that he had decided to quit, Ward immediately appointed Mike Holovak to coach the National Football League club for the one game.

Holovak, 57, had been the team's scouting director and had coached the New England Patriots. He will become the Jets' fourth coach in their last 20 games. Charley Winner was the coach when the 1975 season began, but was dismissed midway through and replaced by Ken Shipp. Then Ward went on an intensive search to find a man to turn around a team with a glamour that, though faded, transcended its skill. The Jets had not had a winning season since the one after their Super Bowl victory in in Holtz, Ward found a dynamic, lean, 150-pounder who spoke quickly and promised New York that "we're going to move the ball-I nope to God

it's forward. Yet, he quickly discovered he missed the teaching that was part of the col-lege scene. He had entertained thoughts of quitting for weeks and had decided after last Sunday's loss to Washington

But Iselin, a benign and fatherly sort, asked for a meeting with Holtz, which caught the coach off guard. Holtz had not been prepared to talk about leaving until the season ended.

HEMPSTEAD, L.I., Dec. 9—He was smiling when he picked up the telephone: the worst was over. His fingers found the right buttons easily, and he waited for his wife to answer. She was in East Liverpool, Ohio, attending her father, who had suffered a stroke. He was in his office, attending to the business of resigning.

"Beth," he said. "Beth, I just got out of the press conference, it's official."

She must have asked him if he was happy, because he said, "Yes, very

Try-Before-Buy Selli Arranged on Ski Sloi

Skiers interested in purchasing new equipment will be able to make decisions close to their sport next Friday, Saturday and Sunday—on the slopes of Moun: Snow. The southern Vermont resort will be the site of a marketing promotion called

"Consumers' Demonstration Days," More than 25 mansking skis, boots, poles and gloves will have representatives there to present a "try before you buy" operation. The arrangement will enable skiers, after paying deposits, to try out equipment on the trails before purchasing or rejecting it.

"This will be no high-pressure deal," said Phil Saluter, Mount Snow's gen-eral manager, yesterday. "A person will be in a position to try out as many brands of skis and other equipment as desired with no obligation to buy. For a skier who wants to try four or five types, all it will take is stamina." Manufacturers representatives, arriving in vans, will offer such makes of skis as Rossignol, Olin, Yamaha and Head. There will be at least six bootmakers represented. The prices for boots and skis will range from about "The factory groups are showing lots of enthusiasm over this idea," said Saluter. "And so are our skiers. We all know ski equipment becomes distastefully expensive if a buyer makes pur-chases, decides he's made a mistake and then thinks in terms of replacing

Miss Fisher Takes 2d in Giant Slalom Sports Today

Special to The New York Times

VAL d'ISERE, France, Dec. 9 -Abbi Fisher, a very competitive skier from South Conway, N.H., finished second today in the opening action of the World Cup, a giant slalom. She was 19 one-hundredths of a second behind Lise-Marie Morerod of Switzerland, the winner of seven World Cup races last season, and 19 one-hundredths of a second ahead of Annemarie Proell-Moser of Austria, the titleholder for five successive years on skiing's only major league circuit.

Two other Americans broke into the top 10, Cindy Nelson finishing eighth and Becky Dorsey 10th in a race that did wonders for the confidence and enthusiasm of the United States

The result also established a reputation for the 19-year-Miss Fisher, who had a fifth-place finish and some injuries to show for her previous 11/2 years on the World Cup beat.

Nicknamed Mickey Mouse

"I wanted to start off the year good and I guess I have," she said, waiting at the finish line to see if anyone could top her clocking of 1 minute 17.10 seconds. The only one succeeding was Miss Morerod, 20, a member of the Swiss ski team that has given Miss Fisher the nickname of Mickey Mouse because of the way she tucks in the downhili event.

Miss Fisher was loose and supple today as she twisted around the 53 gates, the torn ligaments in her knee that kept her out of the Innsbruck Olympics not bothering her. She made only a slight mistake, approaching the finish with her body not low enough to escape the wind. She said she was a bit nervous, a common feeling for her at the beginning of each season, and often a helpful feeling. It snows her that she's in tough competition, and she has always liked that, even in soccer and field hockey. Now, she only has time for skiing, also a sport of her family.

Mrs. Moser, 23, also has decided to dedicate herself to the snow sport. She sat out last year, opting for the comforts of home rather than the pressures of winning. But she could not stay away and opened her comeback with an exhausting third place.

She said she finished the race crying "I've never suffered before like I did yet fit, but I also know I still have the will to win, the right mental ap-

Betty Stove Advances With Mrs. Court at Net

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 9 (AP) Betty Stove ousted Janet Newberry, 6-2, 6-1, today and advanced to a semi-final encounter with Margaret Court in the Toyota women's tennis tourney. Mrs. Court eliminated a fellow Australian, Kerry Reid, 7-6, 6-2, for her quarterfinal victory.

LIHUE, Hawaii, Dec. 9 (UPI)-Renee Richards, formerly Richard Raskind, advanced to the quarterfinals of a $20,000 women's tennis tournament yesterday by edging Kate Latham, 7-5, 6-3. In her quarterfinal match, Miss Richards will meet Mary Hamm, who advanced by beating Nancy Ornstein, 3-6, 6-0, 6-1. In other first-round matches, Karen Wikstedt, 6-2. Krantzcke upset Mimmi Wikstedt, 6-2, 6-7, 6-3, and Carrie Meyer got past Ceci Martinez, 6-2, 6-7, 6-3.

Ali's 80-Acre Retreat

In Michigan Is on Sale BERRIEN SPRINGS, Mich., Dec. 9

(UPI)—The 80-acre retreat Muhammed Ali used as a training camp for his heavyweight title defense against Ken Norton Sept. 28 went on the selling block today for nearly $1.5 million. A local real estate company said it purchased the estate in this rural southwestern Michigan outpost yester-day following nearly a month of ne-gotiations with the supposedly retired champion. It was immediately put on the market.

James L. Kovach, president of Century 21 Kovach Real Estate, said the $1,450,000 asking price was considerably higher than what Ali paid for the estate in October 1975. He cited the promotional value of Ali's brief resi-

Tennis Officials Assail Ramirez Reinstatement

HOUSTON, Dec. 9-One tennis offi-chal called it "shocking." Another said it had set back officiating in the sport "at least 10 years." Others shrugged and wondered why anyone expected anything more.

The chief topic of conversation at the Grand Prix Masters was not to-night's semifinal match between Guiliermo Vilas of Argentina and Wojtek Fibak of Poland but last night's dispute-marred encounter between Brian Gottfried and his good friend and doubles partner, Raul Ramirez.

Gottfried won the match, 4-6, 6-3 6-0, but only after the umpire, Jack Stahr, had ruled in the third set that Ramirez had defaulted, and after Ramirez had been reinstated by a three-member tournament committee, which overruled Stahr and ordered that the match resume, following a 38-minute

None of the three members of the committee (Geoff Mullis, tournament director, John Beddington, tennis director, and Mike Blanchard, referee) saw the events that led to Stahr's decision to terminate the match with Gott-fried serving at 2-0, 30-15. Two of the three, Mullis and Beddington, are employees of the sponsoring corporation, Commercial Union, with an ac-knowledged interest in protecting certain corporate positions, particularly in public relations. All three said they had been influenced by the demands of the players and the public that the match be resumed, even after the players had left the court. Stahr, from Larchmont, N.Y., has umpired at the national level since 1933 and is considered one of the sport's most knowledgeable officials. He was informed of the decision to overrule him during a news interview that was being piped over the public-address system in the Summit arena.

"First they want umpires to toughen up on the players," said one British tennis official. "Then, when an umpire gets the courage to stand on his feet, they shoot him down." The dispute began after Ramirez had chosen not to return a serve, saying he had seen, from the corner of his eye a hand waving in the air that he took to be a call by a service linesman but probably was a court-side photog-

A debate ensued between Ramirez and Stahr whether a "let" should be played. It deteriorated into a dispute, with Stahr insisting that Ramirez was stalling and "milking the situation for laughs," Ramirez asserting that Stahr was "indecisive," and Gottfried declining Stahr's invitation to serve, because of what Gottfried felt was excessive crowd noise.

Stahr issued Ramirez several warnings before a default was ruled. Stahr was overruled because, among other things. Gottfried said the Mexican had been "dealt with unfairly."

"Could you see the National Football League doing something like this?" one Texas tennis official said cynically, citing the decision by the committee as another example of the sport's inability to control players or situations.

At least two prominent officials of the International Lawn Tennis Federation, David Gray and Derek Hardwick, supported Stahr's decision and criticized the committee. Other officials saw possible conflict-of-interest impli-cations in having employees of the sponsoring company as members of the tournament committee that must weigh potentially delicate issues.

Stahr declined to continue as umpire after the match had resumed but is a member of the United States Tennis Association's officiating committee for the Davis Cup match between the United States and Mexico in Tucson, Ariz, next week. Ramirez is a member of the Mexican Davis Cup squad, and Gottfried of the American squad, and they could meet again in singles.

Although he won the match and ap-peared assured of a spot in the semifi-nals, Gottfried was eliminated hours later on a technicality. The two spots in the group went to Harold Solomon and Vilas, who defeated Solomon, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 in a match that was not completed until 12:59 this morning, local time. Solomon, Vilas and Gottfried finished with 2-I won-lost records (Ramirez was 0-3). The determinant used to break the deadlock was the percentage of sets won in the round-robin, of the number played. Thus, Gottfried was eliminated despite his three-set victory over Vilas on Monday night. Solomon will face Manuel Grantes in the second semifinal tomorrow night. The singles final, worth $40,000 to the winner, will be played Sunday after-

The trophy is awarded to the best major college team in the East.

Scotland Leads in World Cup Golf

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. Dec. 9 (UPI)-Brian Barnes of Scotland shot a twounder-par 70 and his partner, Sam Torrance, posted a 73 today to give their country a first-round lead over the United States and Taiwan in the 24th World Cup golf championship.

Barnes, however, had to settle for second-place tie with the United States Open champion, Jerry Pate, Park Jung Ung of South Korea and Craig DeFoy of Wales. Kuo Chie-hsiung, of Taiwan and Ernesto Acosta of Mexico shot 69's. A four-time Ryder Cup team player, Barnes had four birdies and two bogeys on a card of 35-35 which helped Scotland to a one-stroke lead over the American team of Pate and Dave Stockton, the PGA champion and Tai-

Stockton, his game still rusty from a two-month layoff shot a two-over 74 to give the United States, favored to win the title for the 14th time, an even-par score of 144. The Australian team of Greg Norman and Bob Shearer shot 145 to trail by

Baseball Giving Oriole-Games-in-Washington Plan Another Time at Bat By LEONARD KOPPETT The present proposals involve resolucial to The New York Times tions passed by both major leagues,

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9-A vague promise to try to arrange some baseball games by the Baltimore Orioles in Washington in 1978 was the substance of a much-heralded plan introduced to-day to "solve" baseball's "Washington

ملذامنه لأصل

The problem is that when the Washington Senators moved to Texas after the 1971 season, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn gave assurances that baseball would make every effort to return to the nation's capital. A projected sale of the San Diego Padres to a Washington group was announced but conceled in 1973, and proposals similar to this one have been turned down by the Baltimore club at least twice.

But Kuhn, who took a plane to Washington immediately after the annual winter meetings ended here tonight, will try to convince Congressional representatives tomorrow that this proposal is newer and better.

twice since. No other sport has such an exemption. For one year, the National League will waive its requirement for a unanimous vote on any matter concerning their complicated interaction

The Orioles will try to shift an un-

-presumably 13, according to some specified number of their home games

Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in 1978.

The number of games, and the pat-tern, said Kuhn, would have to be "satisfactory to the Washington community." He couldn't identify what the

"Washington community" encom-passed, but he did mention Congress as an element and acknowledged that there were political considerations in-

Various Congressmen have threat-ened repeatedly to initiate legislation that would strip baseball of its antitrust exemption, granted 54 years ago by the Supreme Court and reaffirmed the Washington question. A 9-3 vote will be sufficient.

The National League agrees "in principle" to let any National League team move to Washington—if Baltimore does not use the territory-if some N.L. team wants to..

The league agrees that, for one year, a 9-3 (instead of a unanimous) vote will be enough to approve a request by an existing American League team to shift to the National League and to occupy Washington. That would create two 13-team leagues and auto-matically involve a small amount of interleague play, about 12 games a year for each team.

All this will be academic if Baltimore satisfies the situation, and so long as the Orioles continue to play some games is Washington, the National League will agree not to go into that territory.

But if Baltimore doesn't have a Washington role, that implies an escape hatch for the San Francisco Giants, if they continue their worsening situation in California. By the same token, there could be an escape hatch for the Oakland A's, who face a poor situation in

None of this really commits anyone to anything, of course, except a dec-laration of good intentions.

"Actually, we're telling you only half a story because we're still in the process of trying to work out what can be done," said Kuhn. "The whole story hasn't happened yet."

There was no mention, in the resolu-tions or in the public discussion of them by Kuhn, or Lee MacPhail and Chub Feeney, the league presidents, of the widely rumored peripheral issue: Charley Finley's lawsuit against baseball (scheduled to start next week in Chicago), the California "Bay Area problem" and expansion in general.

Finley is suing because Kuhn vetoed three players sales worth $3.5 million last June. It had been suggested that an arrangement that would let Finley move into the National League with a Washington team might lead to the abandonment of that suit—a suggestion roundly denied by all concerned.

All seem to agree—including Finley—that two teams in the San Francisco-Oakland area can't survive. Almost all agree that some sort of representation in Washington must be arranged. No one seems eager for more expansion (to New Orleans, Buffalo or elsewhere).

owner, explained after having lunch with Burroughs, who lives in nearby

Long Beach. There was nothing in winds, and the told me that he was assured all the policy people in along that he wouldn't be traded. He likes Texas and has a lot of friends there. He's in shock. He's getting married in February and all the guys from Texas will be there."

Turner Makes It Worthwhile

Unlike Scott, who renegotiated the contract on which he had one -season remaining plus an option year, the 25-year-old Burroughs didn't ask Turner to renegotiate his contract, which has two years left-plus an option year. Turner, though, said he had gone out of his way to assure Burroughs he would make him bappy one way

"I told him," Turner related, "that after thinking about it and talking to ster thinking about it and taking to some of our players, if he didn't want to play for the Braves, we'd see if the real could be undone. I told him he rould, play one year for us and if he passer happy we'd trade him. If he was lappy, we'd give him a new contract and include a no-trade provision. Find him if routhing learning. Ily i fold him if nothing else makes im happy, I'd shoot myself as a sign my good intentions. He said I didn't eve to do that.

"He's still shocked, but he was alpost smiling. He ended up cheering me ip. He's going to come to Atlanta next week. I'm sure it will work out."

- Yankees Showed Interest

Burroughs was a highly sought outnelder despite his batting averages of 226 and 237 the last two seasons. The l'ankees had expressed interest in him lest month but sonarently cooled on that the state of the state of 301 in 1974. He hit 29 homers in 1975, out slipped to 18 last season. His best home-run year was 1973, when he belted 30.

Frank Lucchesi, the Ranger manager, suggested that Burroughs had psyched olaying in Arlington Stadium, where he wind and distances to the fences

-lace a premium on home runs. "If Burroughs had to go to one park the majors, it would be Atlanta," ucchesi said, alluding to a stadium nat is one of the most suitable for ome-run hitters. In addition to the three pitchers Buroughs brought, the Rangers also reeived May, who was traded from Milaukee for Henry Aaron two years go, and Henderson, a 30-year-old who zill play right field. Asked how the Braves could afford give up all those players for only ne in return, Turner said: "We didn't ave anybody play out their options, o we have more players than we know what to do with. We could put a team Washington, with the guys we have aft over. For a while last night, it appeared that the Red Sox and Brewers might not have a trade. Scott has played in the majors for more than 10 years, the last five with the same club, so he had to give permission for the Brewers to trade him.

The Brewers, though, never received that permission in writing and, in trading him and Bernie Carbo to Boston for Cecil Cooper, acted on Scott's previously stated desire to be traded, specifically to Boston.

When John Claiborne, the Red Sox assistant general manager, contacted Gary Walker, Scott's agent, he learned that Scott would approve the deal only if he received the kind of contract he

Yesterday, Claiborne left Phoenix, Ariz., where Walker lives, with Walk-er's word that he would recommend to Scott that the players reject the Boston offer. -

Several telephone conversations ensued, though, and Claiborne called Scott in Milwaukee last night during an American League dinner party at the Lakeside Country Club. During that conversation, the terms of the contract sounded good enough to Scott for him to agree to the trade.

Claiborne then put Lee MacPhail, the league president on the phone and had Scott tell MacPhail he had agreed to the terms and the trade.

No one was discussing those terms, but it was believed the Red Sox gave Scott a bonus of about $100,000; a hefty increase over his $144,000 salary for 1977, probably in the neighborhood of $175,000, and still higher salaries for the next two years, perhaps up to $200,000 and $225,000.

Nationals Spurn DH Again

The National League owners, meeting in their first business session, defeated a move to adopt the designated-hitter rule that the American League uses. The vote was 8 to 4.

The owners also re-elected Charles S. Feehy as National League president, despite reported opposition from severai cinbs.

Feeney, whose four-year term was scheduled to expire in 1977, would not reveal the length of his new term. But he did say that he would shift the league's headquarters from San Francisco to New York, something Kuhn has long wanted.

5 of N.F.L.'s Best Teams Are on TV This Weekend

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE

There will be almost 15 hours of proigotball on television this weekend. with three games tomorrow and two Sunday. Each will have one playoff contender favored to win from an opoppent with a losing record. Temorrow brings Minnesota at Miami

(Channel 2, I P.M.), Pittsburgn at Houston (Channel 4 P.M.). On Sunday, Channel 2 will televise the Giants-St. Louis game at the Meadowlands at 1 P.M., rather than Washington at Dallas at 4 P.M., and Channel 4 will have Buffalo at Baltimore, 2 P.M. The regular season ends on Sunday so there will be no fonday night game. Previews of all games follow with won-lest-tied records in parentheses.

LOCAL TEAMS

St. Louis (9-4-0) at Giants (3-10-0) Cardinals will eliminate themseives from the playoffs if they lose, which seems unlikely for a team with so much talent and class. Of their last eight games, six have been against playoff contenders. They won three by a total of 13 points, lost three by 21. Betting choice: St. Louis by 7 points. Cincinnati (9-4-0) at Jets (3-10-0)- if Pittsburgh wins tomorrow, the Bengals are out of the playoffs. Don't blame the Jets should they seem be-writched. bothered, bewildered and scoreboard-watching to see how much longer the season has to last. Petting choice: Cincinnati by 13.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE TOMORROW

-Los Angeles (9-3-1) at Detroit (6-7-0) If Minnesota loses earlier in the day, the Rams can become a home team in the playoffs by defeating the Lions. That need not be hard. Detroit passers, for example, have been sacked 62 times, more than any other team's odarterbacks. Betting choice: Los Angeles by 7.

SUNDAY

Washington (9-4-0) at Dallas (11-2-0) -- Redskins will know where they stand, because Cardinals-Giants game should be over before the kickoff at lexas Stadium. If Cardinals have won, Skins must take Dallas to reach the playoffs, and this will not be easy. If Cards have lost, Washington can lose also and will still quality for playoffs as will National Conference's Card effiry. These teams despise each other. They have played 12 times beginning in 1971, and each has won six. Betting caoice: Dallas by 4.

'Green Bay (4-9-0) at Atlanta (4-9-0)-Packers will give the seasoned, well-traveled Randy Johnson a starting role at quarterback. Why not? Falcons completing 11th National Football League season on dismal note. It's their eighth lesing campaign. Betting choice: Atlanta by 2.

San Francisco (7-6-0) at New Orleans (2-9-0)—Although he is fit Jim Phun-kett has been benched as 49ers' quarterback in favor of Scott Bull. Team won six of its first seven and has lost five of its last six. Saints got through the year in orderly fashion and look for Archie Manning to return as quarterback, betting choice: New Orleans

Seattle (2-11-0) at Philadelphia (3-10-0)-The Eagles' fans are something. About 55,000 will turn out to see this supposed contest. Betting choices: Philadelphia by 7.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE TOMORROW

Pittsburgh (9-4-0) at Houston (5-8-0)

— The Oilers premise to put up a battle, but they have key people injured like Dan Pastorini the quarterback, and Curley Culp, the middle guard. A victory will clinch a division title for Steelers. Betting choice: Pittsburgh by 14.

SUNDAY

Buffalo (2-11-0) at Baltimore (10-3-0)
—Colts have a problem. They have used only three running backs all season, and two are now hurt, Roosevelt Leaks and Don McCauley. However, both will play against the Bills. Considering all the adversity—loss of his fulback and quarterback—O. J. Simpson's season may be his greatest. Betting choice: Baltimore by 6.

Cleveland (9-4-0) at Kansas City (4-9-0)—The coaches offer a contrast. Forrest Gregg's second season running the Browns has been a big success, while Paul Wiggin's second with the Chiefs has not. Most thought it would be the other way around. Betting choice: Cleveland by 3.

New England (10-3-0) at Tampa Bay (0-13-0)—Chuck Fairbanks says he will rest some battered Patriots, although Sam Cunningham, the fullback who has missed four games, will play to get ready for playoffs. Buccaneers ready to make N.F.L. history by losing their 14th game. No one has done that before. Betting choice: New England by

San Diego (6-7-0) at Oakland (12-1-0) -Chargers have done well enough that the coach, Tommy Prothro, was rehired yesterday. Raiders have won nine straight and are getting better and better, especially against the rush. Bet-ting choice: Oakland by 10:

INTERCONFERENCE TOMORROW

Minnesota (10-2-1) at Miami (6-7-0)-If the Vikings want the home-field advantage of their tiny icebox in Bloomington for the playoffs, they need to win this one. Dolphins expect to give them a battle, although the defense against Viking pass attack will be weak. Bob Griese will start at quarter-back. Betting choice: Minnesota by 3. SUNDAY

Denver (8-5-0) at Chicago (7-6-0)-Both sides have been pleased with their seasons and are looking ahead. Bears want Walter Payton to win the league rushing title, and they intend to shred Broncos' four-linebacker detense. Betting choice: Chicago by 7.

business since suffering a nearly fatal heart attack in September. His vote of confidence resierday pressured Holtz into remaining—for the day.

"I thought it was a decision I had to make," Holtz said today "The New York Jets have given me love and respect and I've given love and respect back, but I cannot give pro football my heart. This is the first time in the last three weeks I've had inner peace."

When Holtz told the players his decision, they were "shocked," according to Winston Hill, the right tackle who has been a Jet since 1963.

"I didn't see it coming," said Hill.
"But I'm convinced that he's at peace with that decision. Twenty years from now it will be looked back on as an experience—he won't have any regrets about it. If he's happy in college, he's better off there."

David Knight, the Jets' receiver, played for Holtz at William and Mary, and Knight remembered a farewell speech there by the coach.

"He came to us the last week of the season when there were rumors about him going to North Carolina State," said Knight. "He was unhappy about some things going on at William and Mary. Some of the players broke curfour and spelly the term just didn't few, and really, the team just didn't have great players. So he explained to us that he would probably be leaving for a school where the players had more to give.' Well, I'm glad he got the chance here. Life goes on."

Holtz's last year at William and Mary was 1971, when he completed his third year. He went on to North Carolina State for four seasons, compiling an regular season. Often, he appeared em-barrassed when questioned about the song. He also rehearsed his men in the fore the club played its first regularseason game. After it had lost its third straight exhibition, he said in an un-guarded moment, "If I had known coaching the pros was going to have this much pressure, I never would have taken the job." A few minutes later, though, he said, "Forget I said that."

Changing his mind and showing his emotion were Holtz trademarks. He often spoke of his quarterback situation as "my personal 'Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman' drama." He had the experienced pro, Joe Namath, and the rookie, Richard Todd, and he flipflopped several times in deciding how to use them and which one to start.

up at camp, Holtz did not like the exsailing 20 vards downfield.

His most notable moment came in the great housecleaning a day and a before the season's opener: He made 26 player changes. In all, more than half the players on last year's 3-11 squad were dismissed. Virtually all of them have failed to find a job in pro said Elsie Cohen, his personal secre-tary. "I always thought he wouldn't do anything he wasn't comfortable with. He'd looked very thoughtful all week. When he said he was going to stay, that's when I was surprised. This morning he came in and said how cold it was outside. Coach Holtz doesn't like the cold, you know."

Connie Nicholas, the secretary to Maike Holovak-now the Jets' interim coach for their last game of this season remembers hearing the news and hagging Holtz, as a daughter hugs her father when she hears good news.

"I saw he was so happy, and I was so happy for him," she said. "He's at peace with himself now. When he came in this morning, he had such a glow about him. After yestereday, when he said he would stay, he wasn't quite himself.

heen the same happy-go-lucky guy, the college coach.

"I'd give the Jets my heart," he said. "But I couldn't give them my soul. I'd cut off my right arm for them, but my soul just isn't in professional football. Lou Holtz isn't cut out for professional football. There are 25 million people in this area, and right now they're probably wondering—what in the world is the matter with that insane man?

Facing the cameras and the notebooks one more time, Holtz spoke of his decision and why he made it. He said that he first began to think about it when the cold weather settled on Long Island, hunkering down as if in a siege. He spoke of liking the Jets, even loving the Jets.

But there aren't very many people who know me well. I feel that you have to do what makes you happiest.

he'll be doing a lot of things his way.

He can create a lot of things himself."

McAdoo, now 25 years old, was the 1972-73 rookie of the year and the 1974-75 most valuable player in the N.B.A. He has played both center and forward during his career. Lonnie

McAdoo. "I couldn't allow the threat of suddenly losing McAdoo to hang over the heads of our stockholders,

our incredibly loyal fans and the team itself. Not only that, but, while I was dealing with Buffalo in strict good faith, they were playing us off against the Knicks by giving me an unreason-ably brief time for signing McAdoo." McAdoo is in the last year of a five-

Those people don't have to be inside of me. I've always prided myself on being able to explain how I felt. But can't explain my feelings now. All I know is that they are sincere."

Today, said Connie Nicholas, it was like a veil lifting. For the past few weeks, as the Jets performed so poorly on the field and, in practice, Holtz was almost tormented. It wasn't just losing, it was watching winter settle in, and thinking about just how lonely the rest of this year

"I thought about being alone here," Holtz said later, in the privacy of his office. He sat racing the photo taken the day he signed with the Jets. Berind him was the game ball from the Jets' first victory this season. thought about all the players leaving, about being alone here with the office help. I just couldn't see it for me. Look, I'm not smart enough to con anybody But you'll acknowledge that I'm different today-I'm at peace."

Dan Henning, the Jets' quarterback coach who once played for Hoitz at William and Mary, saw that He said that Holtz looked unhappy the last few weeks. Today, he said Holtz looked re-

THE 1977 CAPRICE $165.31 A MONTH*

AT KINNEY CHEVROLET IN BROOKLYN OR RIVERHEAD.

Chevrolet's slogan for 1977 is "... now that's more like it." And no car expresses that idea better than the 1977 Caprice. Its new, classically-designed body is smaller than in previous years, yet General Motors has not sacrificed the spaciousness you require for driving comfort.

Nor has Kinney made you sacrifice on price. Because for $165.31 a month you can own and drive a new four-door Caprice. That includes a 305 cubic inch V-8 engine, four seasons air-conditioning, tinted glass all around, glassbelted whitewall tires, rear window delogger and an AM/FM radio. The price also includes full dealer preparation and Kinney's special 3-year or 36,000 mile "power train" warranty.

Of course, when you buy any new Chevrolet or Oldsmobile from Kinney, you also benefit from our 50 years experience in sales and service of General Motors automobiles. And because we have a dealership on each end of Long Island, you're never more than 45 minutes from a Kinney . . . and a new

Flyers Beat Bruins, 3-1, Ending Jinx

BOSTON, Dec. 9 (AP)—Gary Dornhoefer's power-play goal put Philadelphia in front to stay in the first period as the Flyers ended an old Boston jinx tonight with a 3-1 victory over the Bruins in a National Hockey League

Bruins in a National Hockey League game.

The Flyers had not won in 22 regular-season games in Boston Garden, although they had won in the playoffs. Their won-lost-tied record had been 0-18-4 during the regular season since a 4-2 victory on Nov. 12, 1967, their first visit to the Garden.

Dornhoefer snapped a 1-1 tie by scoring on a rebound of a shot by Rick MacLeish at 11:31 of the opening period. The edge was all Bernie Parent, the Flyers' goalie, needed in extending the team's unbeaten streak to nine games.

Philadelphia nailed down the victory when Bobby Clarke was awarded a goal at 19:40 after Boston had pulled its goalie, Gilles Gilbert, for a sixth skater. Clarke's shot on a breakaway missed the open net, but he was awarded the goal because Bobby Schmautz of Boston threw his stick at the puck.

Parent had just 17 saves and Gilbert
14 in the defensive game.

straight time this season, used its superior height and 21 turnovers by the Rams to carve the triumph. The Jayhawks were led in scoring by Douglas, a 6-2 guard, who scored 20 points, hitting half of his 16 shots from the floor. Also in double figures were Clint Johnson and Koenigs with 10 points each. Koenigs hauled in 10 rebounds and led Kansas to a 30-21 edge in that department. The Fordham shooters, except for

"I'm pleased that we stuck with our game plan for one half," said Stewart.
"But I can't be pleased with what happened in the final 20 minutes.

In the second half, Fordham pleyed without Rich Dunphy, a senior forward who hurt his wrist late in the first half. He will undergo X-rays today to determine the extent of the injury.

Maine 78, City College 59

Special to The New York Times ORONO, Me., Dec. 9 - Paul Wholey, a 6-foot guard, scored 20 points to lead the University of Maine to a 78-50 romp over City College.
Richie Silvera led the Beavers' attack with 15 points and nine rebounds. City College, now 1-3, will next meet Harvard tomorrow night in Cambridge.

Syracuse 87, Biscayne 63
SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 9 (AP)— Syracuse University's 20th-ranked team rolled to an 87-63 victory over Biscayne College here last night behind the graning of Bossevelt Boylia and the scoring of Roosevelt Bouie and Larry Kelley.

Bouie, a freshman, scored 13 points, playing less than half the game. Jim Boeheim, Syracuse coach, cleared the bench as his team jumped out to a 50-22 halftime lead.

The 5-1 Syracuse club was unable to put a harness on Biscayne's Mike La-Prete, however, as he registered 18 points for scoring honors.

2 Giants Work Out At New Positions

Special to The New York Times

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J., Dec. 9— Two members of the Giants' offensive squad worked at defensive positions today at Giants Stadium as injuries continue to deplete the National Foot-ball League team. Ron Mikolajczyk, an offensive lineman, practiced at defen-sive tackle, where the Giants have only

The Cardinals, who must beat the Giants to preserve their chance for a wild-card playoff berth, said Clarence Duren, a reserve safety, was definitely out of the game and Ike Harris, a starter at wide receiver, was questionable. Pat Tilley would be Harris's replace-

David Randolph and his Masterwork Chorus and Chamber Ensemble will offer four performances—tonight in South Crange, N.J., and tomorrown ight and Sunday afternoon and evening in Carnegie Hall. There also will be performances this weekend by the Queens Choral Society, the Brooklyn. Philharmonia, the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, St. Batholomew's Church, the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church (part I only), the Abyssinian Baptist Church and the Church of the Holy Trinity. And there will be many more in the days to come, including further efforts by Mr. Randolph and his forces, Richard Westenburg's Musica Sacra at Avery Fisher Hall on Dec. 20 and the annual "Messiah" sing-in at Fisher Hall on Dec. 23.

at Fisher Hall on Dec. 23.

The whole process will be repeated with slightly less intensity come Easter, and indeed "Messiah" (not "The Messiah," if you want to get pedantic about it) is likely to crop up at any time of year. It's hard to think of another perennial in all the performing arts to match it—the vogue for "The Nutcracker" is far more recent, and no piece of instrumental or operatic music

A Friendly, Humorous Brecht, A 'Happy End'

APPY END, the Kurt Weill-Bertolt Brecht musical (some people may say it is a lyric piece for theater) has not been seen much in this country, but now it will Michael Harvey will produce "Happy End," and he has signed Shirley Knight and Tony Lo Bianco to star in it, and Michael Posnick to direct it. "Happy End" will be at the Buffalo Studio Arena from Jan. 21 to Feb. 19, and after that, Mr. Harvey says, he would like to book it into two other cities before bringing it to Broadway in April 'Happy End' is the opposite of what you think of as Brecht," Mr. Harvey says. "This is a warm, friendly, humorous

"Happy End." as adapted from the German by Michael Feingold, was done at Yale in 1972 and again last year. Mr. Harvey, who produced "Kenne-dy's Children" and the revival of "Sweet Bird of Youth," first saw it then, "Happy End" is set in Chicago in 1910, and even though it has seldombeen produced, some of its songs—"Surabaya Johnny," "The Bilbao Song" and "Sailor's Tango"—frequently turn up in other places. Miss Knight and Mr. Lo Bianco, who presumably will be singing, or perhaps talking, the songs, have not been much identified with musicals, although certainly they have been identified with good theater.

Miss Knight has made many films, winning nominations for a couple of Oscars, and has appeared in many plays. Last season she won a Tony as best featured actress for her performance in "Kennedy's Children." Mr. Lo Bianco has also appeared in films and plays, but perhaps you remember him best of all for his tour de force in "Yanks 3 Detroit 0 Top of The Seventh" at the American Place Theater the season before last.

The good thing was that she had been praised as a serious actress; the had thing was that "The Eccentricities of a Nightingale" had just posted its closing notice. Betsy Palmer will no longer be Alma Winemiller in Tennessee Williams's play after this Sunday's matinee, although the memory of having been Alma will stay on. "I want to go into a repertory company." Miss Palmer said. "I haven't done Chekhov yet. I've got to do Chekhov." Miss Palmer batted her eyes. They were large and brown. As Alma, she was practically an ingenue. As Betsy Palmer, her career goes back some years.

("I'll tell you my age if you don't repeat it," she said. Consequently, you will not find Miss Palmer's age repeated here.)

"I loved her," Miss Palmer said, speaking about Alma, "Alma and I were one. She was a Scorpio with a passion for living. I'm a Scorpio, too, with a passion for everything.

"Now," Miss Palmer said, "I've always known what I wanted to do, but I've rarely had a chance to do it. If I asked for a part a producer would say, 'Why, Betsy, why do you want to do that?'

Someone suggested to Miss Palmer that the producers were still thinking of her as the nurse in the movie "Mister oberts." She was the quintessendoing Alma, I turned on the television set in my room, and I heard this voice. It was me in Mister Roberts.' I hadn't seen it since I made it."

"I'm so pleased with myself. I can't even tell you how much," Miss Palmer said. "I'm not insecure. Whose approval do I need anymore? The past is gone. It's finished. Now is it. Now is what's important. Did I tell you I'm going to do a Captain Kanga-roo segment? I love it. I wish they'd let me be a

John Guare's new play, "Marco Polo Sings a Solo," is now in rehearsal at the Public/Newman Theater, where it will open on Dec. 30. Joe Papp is producing it for the Shakespeare Festival, and its cast includes Larry Bryggman, Joel Grey, Anne Jackson, Jim Jansen, Madeline Kahn, Chris Sarandon and Sigourney Weaver. This may be considered a very respectable cast, just as Mr. Guare may be considered a very respectable playwright. Here is Mr. Guare, talking about his life as a playwright:

"I started writing plays at 11, and I've written a play every year since 1956, when I was 28. How many of my plays have been produced? [Herein, Mr. Guare starts counting on his tingers.] Marco Polo will be my 13th. When a play of mine closes, I want a new play to go to. That's how I wrote Marco Polo.' I had the music from Two Gentlemen of Verona' ringing in my ears. I had to get the music out.

"So, I was coming back from the London produc "Yes," she said. "One day in Buffalo, when I was in New York without having a new play finished."

"People think that the heart of Off Off Broadway is the Lower East Side," Mr. Moss said. "But there's an enormous amount of theaters in the Chelsea-Clinton area." Around the corner from Playwrights Horizon are Chelsea Theater Center's Westside Theater and the Direct Theater and nearby is St. Clement's.

When Mr. Moss transferred his company to West 42d Street, he rented "a derelict theater." a remnant of realtor Irving Maidman's futile attempt in the early 60's to revitalize the street. Mr. Moss gutted the building, removing the second floor and raising the roof of the theater, and cleaning the building down to its basement. That building, at 422 West 42d Street, is now occupied by the Lion company, with Mr. Moss and cleaning and repairing buildings. He is his gang going happily down the street now at 416 West 42d Street. 100 World Previews

The 42d Street Gang has allied itself with the 42d Street Redevelopment Corporation, which plans to renew the entire 42d Street from the East River to the Hudson River. According to Mr. Moss, the redevelopment corporation's original plan for the theater block was "to tear it down."

Instead, encouraged by Mr. Moss, the organization decided to create a "theater row." The corporation, under the direction of Frederic S. Papert, took possession of all the buildings except one on the south side of the street from Ninth Avenue to Dyer Avenue (the exit from the Lincoln Tunnel). The exception is Mr. Moss's structure, still owned by the Washington Beef Company. Mr. Moss hopes that 'it will eventually come under the corporation's management. Renovation is scheduled to begin in March, and to be completed by September 1977.

"It's an odd and unlikely coalition between big banking interests and small Off Off Broadway companies," said Mr. Moss. "Bankers wouldn't know what to do with that property. Would they make it a parking lot? We know how to recycle old material. It's an amazing merger, and a dynamite thing that's happening here."

It has not yet been decided what theaters will occupy the renovated buildings, but, said Mr. Moss, "I want an exciting mix of theater activity," with room for touring companies, rehearsal space and acting classes. 100 World Previews

Mr. Moss's company has a mix of its own. Organized in 1971 at Clark Center as a home for new plays, Playwrights Horizon has staged more than 100 world premieres, including the original productions of Robert Patrick's "Kennedy's Children" and Jack Heffner's "Vanities" (in collaboration with the Lion company). Lately it has also begun to produce classics, which it sends to its Queens Theater-inthe-Park, on the site of the 1964 World's

This season Playwrights Horizon has four playwrights in residence: Marsha Sheiness; Philip Magdalany (his "Boo Hoo" opened the season), Martin Sherman and Kenneth Press-man. Mr. Moss has hired the four to do office work at Playwrights Horizon at the same time that he has commissioned them to write playswith production assured.

Mr. Moss can scarcely contain his enthusiasm about the future of his street-six theaters, a restaurant, the possibility of actors living in new

"It is not a pipe dream any more," he said, and indicated that he's already thinking about one block west. He feels that some of the buildings between 10th and 11th Avenues would be ideal places to store scenery and properties.

Asked if he had ever thought about renewing 42d Street between Seventh and Eighth Avenues-once a home of legitimate theater and now a seedy neon strip of last-rum movies—he said, ebulliently "That's a Technicolor dream. Some of those theaters, such as the New Amsterdam, are gorgeous." Then he started planning "We build up here, then we move down there. All those theaters need is scrubbing and cleaning. We're experts at scrubbing and clean-ing." One could imagine the 42d Street Gang going back into action.

Stage: 'Theater Songe By Maltby and Shi.

HEATER SONGS by Maltby and Shire" in the cabaret at the Manhattan Theater Club could have been entitled "Special Material." Richard Malthy, as lyricist, and David Shire, as composer, have written songs for, among others, Barbra Streisand, Pearl Bailey, Andy Williams, Robertz Flack, Shirley Bassey and Robert Goulet. Although the songs were designed specifically for these different personalities, they have an identifiable melodic and lyrical line. They are romantic but not sentimental, simple but not too simple. They are ironic without being acerbic and they deal mostly with the subject of love.

Hearing these 22 songs, one necessarily concludes that Mr. Malthy and Mr. Shire should be writing book shows of their own for Broadway instead of tailoring material for solo performers—or, in the case of Mr. Shire, writing movie scores—his credits include "All the President's Men" and "The Conversation."

As theater songs, they are very actable, and the Manhatian Theater Club eveing, neatly staged by the lyricist, shows the work in a most felicitous setting. This is an intimate, un-pretentious three-person, one-piano revue, with no dull chatter and an abundance of music.

The two young women in the cast, Loni Ackerman and Margery Conen, do most of the singing-and they are captivating. Each has her own style. Miss Ackerman is gaminlike, with porcelain skin, a crystal voice and a terrific delivery. Miss Cohen is pert and wide-eyed, a small woman with a big voice. The two of them are energetic and expressive, with talents that are sizable enough for them to play starring roles on Broadway—perhaps in those Malthy-Shire musicals yet to

ANCARLO GIANNINI, the cinema's most ingratiatingly unregenerate male chauvinist, will scon cast his powerful macho spell on an American female. Candice Bergen, the liberated actress and photojournalist, will foin Mr. Giannini in Calabriz, Italy, on Jan. 3 for the shooting of "A Night Full of Rain;" the story of a lovely, vulnerable photojournalist who clicks her shutter and goes faint at the sight of an egotistical peacock of an Italian Communist. The director and writer of the film is Lina Wertmuller, the whirlwind who whipped Mr. Giannini through his bravura course in "Love and Anarchy," "The Seduction of Mimi," "Swept Away" and "Seven Beauties." This time: however, the frenzied tour will be conducted in Eng-

"Lina and I should get along fine," said Miss Bergen, a few mornings ago in her Central Park South duplex, dressed in a simple caltan and wearing no makeup. "There is a certain halting quality to our communication, since Lina doesn't speak much English and I'm just learning to order a meal in Italian, but we have a common philosophical and political background, the same value system. The film will explore 10 years of a relationship between a man and a woman. I play a feminist who marries, has a child, and abandons a lifestyle in exchange for the man she's married."

Will there be a happy ending? "Yes . . and no."
Without the benefit of divorce? "Yes. However . . You know in spite of the fact that I myself am not married and don't have children, the pain of the pulse this woman feels her conflict is some thing I feel very strongly. Being a woman these days is like induced psychosis. At best, the options facing us are exhibitanting at worst, they're paralyzing. I truly am not rabid. I'm just stuck. I'm trying to figure out what I'm supposed to be doing with my life. Turning 30 really affected me. For the first time. I'm starting to feel as if I'm on this irreversible treadmill. I'm on my way to the gram reaper, and I'm trying to figure out how to survive, how to outwit him. Isn't it interesting, by the way, that death is a man and nature is a woman?"

death is a man and nature is a woman?"

Life was simpler as a privileged Hollywood tot, cuddling up with Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd and tonight at 9 Miss Bergen can attempt to rekindle the innocent bliss of childhood by tuning in to Edgar Bergen and his fondly remembered dummies while they read the verse of Ogden Nash on Channel 13's "Boston Pops in Hollywood." "I still talk to Charlie on the phone every couple of weeks," she said with a childlike smile. "He and Mortimer always had a kind of amorphous identity for me. They were not quite human, but they were for me. They were not quite human, but they were certainly more than dolls. And the fact that my father's radio program was called The Charlie McCar-thy Show, with Edgar Bergen, must have meant something. Maybe Charlie was human, Who's to say?"

Tomorrow at 11:30 P.M. on Channel 4 Miss Bergen herself will clown around on "Saturday Night Live."
"I love that show. It's like the best of what school should have been, but never was. I must admit, however, that it is beginning to creep into my consciousness that the show is Saturday, and I still haven't the vaguest idea of what I'll be doing."

Should she fall on her face, it won't be the first time. "I're had some real humiliations along the way," she cheerfully conceded, "from The Day the Fish Came Out' to The Hunting Party to "Soldier Blue' to 'The Adventurers.' But you don't get humiliated without asking for it. Anyone who signs up for 'The Adventurers' deserves what he gets. On the other hand, I'm quite proud of some of the work I've done in movies like 'Carnal Knowledge' and 'The Wind and the Lion.'

She also takes pride in her performance in "The Domino Principle," Stanley Kramer's uncoming thriller about a Presidential assassination in which, she plays Gene Hackman's drab, uneducated, 35-year-old wife, a burnt out woman with short, mousy brown hair and a West Virginia twang. Thanks to Gene, it turned out to be the best part I've ever done. I said, I have such a long way to go before I can become that woman, Gene. I just can't do it unless you help me.' He was incredibly generous with his time and energy, his enthusiasm and his outrageous skill. For the first time, I took a risk and didn't Suddenly Caudice Bergen looked astonishingly sol-enn, and absurdly, illegally beautiful.

Richard Dreyfuss's voice was brash but bubbly, as if he were phoming from an underwater echo

"I'm talking through a microphone," he explained, floating in and out of focus, "so that Verna and Roger can listen in and make sure I don't make a fool of myself. Are you there, kids?"

The kids—Verna Fields, a vice president of Universal, and Roger Simon, the 29-year-old actor's husiness partner and the author of "The Big Fix," a detective movie in which he will star next summer maintained a dignified silence. Mr. Dreyfuss, however, sped right ahead, spraying out small thips of information about his latest projects and offering capsule critiques of his past trumphs and tragedies.

After many arduous, secretive months of filming, he is nearing the end of "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," the first film to be directed by Steven ielberg since "Jaws." Early next year, he will change pace by playing Marsha Mason's lover in "The Goodbye Girl," written by Neil Simon and directed by Herbert Ross. "It's my first romantic comedy," he said. "Dillinger" was a comedy, too, but it wasn't very romantic. I wish John Milius had told me he was going for laughs."

It's true that Mr. Dreyfuss's twitchy portrait of the demented Baby Face Nelson in "Dillinger" failed to generate the kind of critical fervor that greeted his depiction of the sensitive boy who goes off to college at the end of "American Graffiti." Superb as he was in that lighthearted look back on the foolishness of the 50's, many critics maintain that he delivered his most powerful performance in "The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz," acting a crude, unscrupulous young lew determined to chisel his way out of a 40's Montreal ghetto. "I was terrible in "Duddy Kravitz," he insisted. "My acting was so premeditated; it was such a false performance. The film acting I like best of mine is in 'Jaws." I was very relaxed and had a hand in the creation of a character." Last season, Mr. Dreyfuss struggled vainly to have the rating on "Inserts"—in which he played a dissipated boy wender reduced to shooting pornographic movies switched from an X to an R. How does he feel about that movie now? "I feel better about broken arms and measles. No one liked that movie gendiferous) except me. One day it will come back on bill with Death in Venice."

Mr. Dreyfuss refused to comment on his appearance in the upcoming television which will be a few which it is a second to make a few which is the second to make a few which is t noises and say, "I'm very fast in it." He would to be evaluated on the basis of his contril 'Close Encounters of the Third Kind," a mov offered him the bonus of acting alongside his directorial idols, Francois Truffaut. "A wonderful things you hear about him are is altogether charming. My only problem I was so shy that I couldn't talk.

Of all Mr. Dreyfuss's attributes, shyness the least publicized. "There are many people shy around. I once played in The Time. Life with Henry Fonda for four months, an got up the courage to say four words to he was a very frustrating experience. I took because of him and because I love the p it turned out to be the worst-directed sho history of the American theater. It was an tion on the part of the director, Edwin She the annoying thing is that the production derful reviews."

The reviews were much more wonderful it for "Whose Little Boy Are You?", the 1971, ma in which he made his Broadway debut a nam veteran whose sweatheart claims she impregnated by the Lord. On opening his minister, a priest and a rabbi stood over his endlessly about the divinity of the unborn, actor's head began to bob up and down belies this, I said to myself. 'It's my open on Broadway and I'm falling asleep!' Nobob to notice, except a friend of my mother's. show, she came backstage and said, Rich fell asleep, didn't you?"

Next year moviegoers may feel they a something familiar, yet foreign, when the visit to their local theater, At least four maj pean hits are being Americanized by He studios. Paramount and Universal are joining to present Roy Scheider as the driver of a t of explosives in William Friedkin's "Sorcerer on Henri-Georges Clouzot's classic chiller of Fear"; Richard Pryor will star as a ragrapepicker in "Which Way Is Up?," Universion of Lina Wertmuller's "The Seduction of Lina Wertmuller"s "The Seduction of Lina Wertmul to be directed by Michael Schultz; a band of lar thieves will try for laughs in Paramount tion on Mario Monicelti's "Big Deal on 1 Street"; and director Melvin Frank will a on Robert Hamer's British murder comed Hearts and Coronets" for 20th Century-Fox.

Foreign films are by no means the only or granted a second life. Both the updated "Kin and "A Star Is Born" are opening rather aus this month, and other past movies getting at 17 and 18 and 1 day look include "Heaven Can Wait"—a mm version of "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," wr Elaine May and starring Warren Beatty, and Old Lace," in which Richard Pryor will upon some shocking secrets about his kr. aunts; and "The Prisoner of Zenda," with Pr ers dueling in dual roles. According to rel-ports, however, "The Last Remake of Bean starring Marty Feldman and Ann-Margret," Short Takes: Brad Dourif, the stuttering of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," Marjoe Gortner in Mike Medoff's film ve: his Off Broadway hit, "When You Comin' B Ryder?" Director Peter Bogdanovich will novelist-turned-soldier in Sam Fuller's Wo-II film, "The Big Red One." Mr. Fuller him play a villain in Wim Wenders's German "Rule Without Exception." Producer Steve plans to shoot "Last Exit to Brooklyn"—in F this spring Carl Weathers, the champ will ton the chin from Sylvester Stallone in " will play a professional football player in Ritchie's "Semi-Tough."

After several years as a choreographer-director on Broadway, Donald McKayle is back on the New York dance scene this weekend with "Blood Memories," a major new dance work for the Alvin Ailey American Dance

The 46-year-old choreographer has never wandered totally affeld from modern dance, where he made his name in the 1950's. But for the last seven years, he has been heavily in-volved in television and the stage, where his choreography and direction for the 1973 musical, "Raisin" won a Tony nomination.

"Blood Memories," which will be given at 2 P.M. tomorrow and at 8 on Sunday at the City Center is the first dance piece Mr. McKayle has done specifically for the Ailey company. The troupe already performs his "Rainbow Round My Shoulder," a powerful treatment of the dreams and despair of men on a chain gang.

With a commissioned score by Howard Roberts, "Blood Memories" is a symbolic treatment of black history. Mr. McKayle uses the image of a river in various areas of the world to describe the black man's destiny from Africa to America.

Cultures of the Rivers
"It deals with the Nile, the Mississippi and the Harlem River, and with the cultures that grew along those rivers," he explained. "There are 20 dancers and Judith Jamison is the Nile, a river that is completely free, in its most primal force. Then with civilization, there is a going against the current. Finally the Harlem River—it's silted and she doesn't move very

The cultural aspects of these societies are also depicted in another set

"In the Nile section, Clive Thompson takes a young bride, There is the beauty of the primitive society. Next, at the mouth of the Mississippi, the water has to be controlled and utilized for the harbor. The scene is New Orleans, and a flood. You have the idea of a big move up the river—the migration—to what everyone thinks is a new start in life and which doesn't aiways turn out so. "With the Harlem River, you have a river controlled and captured. Clive is now a dereiict who reaches to young life. He warms himself by a fire near the water and falls in. I lived along the Harlem River and every five months, there was a body floating in it.

"At the end of Blood Memories," you have a river of still energy. It has no place to go. So it is defiant. And you see a young man in an African dashiki, which he has adapted." 24-Voice Chorus

Gardner Compton, who made the film for "Astarte," Robert Joffrey's rock ballet and who also once danced with Mr. McKayle, has created visual projections for the work, which uses a 24-voice chorus.

Outside New York, Mr. McKayle's

recent choreography has included a suite to Sephardic music for his wife, Lea Vivante, an Israeli-born flamenco dancer, and this summer, a piece to Jelly Roll Morton's music for Israel's Batsheva company.

Lately, however, Mr. McKayle has been busier with his work in California in television and films, and on Broadway. This year and last he was involved in two Broadway failures, "Dr. Jazz" and "1600 Pennsylvania Avenue." "I'm tired of bad Broadway," he said, "If the basic idea is not prepared, there is no way it will get together.

In the 1950's, Mr. Ailey and Mr. McKayle were among the small but important group of black dancers who became prominent in modern dance.

"There was no entry at all to ballet," Mr. McKayle recalled. "I worked with many different people-Merce Cunningham at the Brandeis festival. Anna Sokolow. When I started at the New Dance Group in the late 1940's, it was also a very interesting period in Harlem with Charles White, the painter, and Harry Belafonte and Sydney Poitier flexing their muscles. Robeson's 'Bye and Bye'

"Paul Robeson, whom I adored, sang 'Bye and Bye' for me while I danced solo at the Golden Gate Ballroom at a benefit for his publication, Freedom.' When I went to his funeral last year, this whole thing became very vivid to me again."

It was a friend, studying with Pearl Primus, who led Mr. McKayle into his first formal dance training at the New greater interest in choreography than dancing and also related this choreography to black themes. The first solo he created included his recitation of "Saturday's Child," by the black poet, Countee Cullen. At the first American Dance Festival at Connecticut College in 1948, this solo prompted an educator to voice concern about "the direction my work was taking," Mr. McKayle said. Martha Graham, however, offered him a scholarship. "You're very vulnerable" she told him.

A few years later, Mr. McKayle began dancing on Broadway—he re-placed Mr. Ailey, who was injured, in "House of Flowers." Between such stints he formed a series of companies

(he has now given them up).

A few years ago, Mr. McKayle felt that a new cast in the Alley company for "Rainbow Round My Shoulder" was making the chain gang look too decorative. It was a problem that exemplified the difference between the dancers of his period and today's. "I had to tell them. You're not just creating a pretty design. If your head is furned, it's because you're on a chain gang and someone has just slapped your face.' Dancers today have little rehearsal time and they learn the shape and the count of the dance. It takes the whole soul out of it,

"The reason I came to dancing was to express something. I never thought of movement in terms of formal construction. Dancers today have mar-velous technical skills. But you have to work at getting other juices out of

By JOHN S. WILSON

Cathy Chamberlain, who has studied opera, engineering and fashion design, has been a go-go dancer and who has mastered two musical instrumentsthe jug and the concertina-has finally found a mission in life. She wants to pay homage to the American music heritage.

Her vehicle is a "Rag'n'Roll Revue", a mixture of traditional jazz, old pop standards, vaudeville, hillbilly music and songs that she writes herself and which bear some resemblance to jazz and some resemblance to rock. With the help of a five-piece band, Miss Chamberlain will stir up this mixture at Reno Sweeney, 126 West 13th Street, tonight and tomorrow at 9:30 and midnight, as well as Tuesday through Saturdays for the rest of the . month "T've always reacted to the fact that people say our art forms come from some other place than America," Miss Chamberlain said the other day "I was always very defensive about that. I wanted to reflect American musical

Miss Chamberlain, who is tall (5 feet 8 inches), blonde and 28 years old, has an impressively American musical heritage of her own. Her great-grandfather was a Mid-western American fiddling champion. Her grandparents on her mother's side lived in the Ozark Mountains, where she spent her summers learning to play jug band music. Her grandmother on her father's side was John Charles Thomas's accompanist in the 1920's.

Concertina Cathy

During her visits to the Ozarks, Miss Chamberlain learned to play the jug when she was six. By the time she was 18, she was looking for a more flexible instrument, and, with her first paycheck from working "as temporari-ly as possible" at the Boeing plant in Seattle, where her father was an engineer, she bought a concertina in a pawn shop. Teaching herself to play it, she developed an act during the two years she went to Stevens College in Missouri, where she majored in opera and fashion design.

"I played in a sleazy taco restaurant on Sunday afternoons," she recalled. "I got $15, all the beer I could drink and all the tacos I could eat. I did takeoffs on Marlene Dietrich and Shirley Temple."

When a national company of "Hair" was formed in Seattle in 1970, Miss Chamberlain landed a role and toured with the rock musical until it closed in Miami a few months later. Then she got out her concertina again and, with two guitarists, formed a group called Bacon, Lettuce and Tomato (she was

"I loved the mood of a clarinet," she explained, "It can be sexy, angry or tender. And my mother was a big Benny Goodman fan."

She found her planist in Rich Look, who had been leading a heavy metal rock and roll band called Heavy Breath-

Miss Chamberlain and Mr. Look had been working together for six months at a Woodstock supper club and health food restaurant, Joyous Lake, when she saw a TV special on ragtime music on which she heard a clarinetist who impressed her as just the kind that she wanted. A year later, during a visit to New York, she passed a Greenwich Village club, the Music Box, and heard a clarinet playing.

"It sounded as good as the guy on TV," she said, "We went in and listened and talked. I asked him to join our

The clarinetist was Tony Parenti, a 70-year-old New Orleans veteran who had been prominent in New York jazz since 1930. He was tired of playing the same old songs, he said, and liked the fact that Miss Chamberlain had new material. He agreed to join her and brought along his drummer, Freddie Moore, who was also 70 and had played with such bands as those of King Oliver and Wilbur DeParis. On the way to their first engagement to-gether, Miss Chamberlain saw a rerun of the TV special on raginne and realized for the first time that the clari-netist she had heard then was the clarinetist who had just joined her-Tony Parenti.

Learned About Jazz

Working with Mr. Parenti and Mr. Moore during the next year was a basic education for Miss Chamberlain. "Tony taught me the technical aspects of jazz," she said, "and Fred taught me how to sell a song, how to reach an audience."

But in 1972, a year after joining Miss Chamberlain, Mr. Parenti died and the group's momentum was lost.

"After Tony died," Miss Chamberlain declared, "I never could find another clarinet player who could cover as much as he did. So I hired a horn section-cornet and tuba plus clarinet. But it was too expensive. I couldn't afford it. We kept the basic essentials, a bare rhythm section and started all over

Traipsing in and out of a variety of New York clubs-Kenny's Castaways, Max's Kansas City, the Fugue, Tramp's —beating their way along the college circuit, the group began to build a following. As it got more money, Miss Chamberlain added more instruments and now, in addition to Mr. Look and Mr. Moore, she has Warren Vache, Jr., (who also plays with Benny Goodman), on cornet, either Kenny Davern of Soprano Summit or Joe Muranyi, Louis Armstrong's last clarinetist, on clarinet and soprano saxophone, and, on tuha, either Howard Johnson or Bob Stewart, two of New York busiest freelance tuba

"I'm flattered that all these fellows play with me," Miss Chamberlain said.
"They don't need my gig. This isn't their music—it's not traditional jazz. But they do like the music and I consider it a compliment."

Theater: Brilliant Fragments of Beckett

By CLIVE BARNES

HE BLEAK pain of Samuel Beckett, his quiet agony, his stoic acceptance, and his minimal, but haunting poetry, are back with us again, this time at the Arena Stage's Kreeger Theater in Washington. Wednesday night the Arena offered the American premiere of th etwo latest Beckett fragments, "That Time" and "Footballs."

Appropriately enough, they are staged by Alan Schneider, who has justifiably established himself as Beckett's American mentor. They are paired with an earlier Beckett work, "Play." The evening is brief, brilliant, and quite indescribable in ordinary dramatic terms.

Mr. Scheneider himself gives mildly puzzled notes in the program, but puzzlement is not Mr. Beckett's problem. As Mr. Schneider puts it so well, the two new plays "represent a kind of theatrical chamber music." So to an extent does the earlier one There is no point to exploring what Beckett means by this or that. These are freefall adventures into language, music

Where Beckett came from is obvious enough. He was James Joyce's secre-tary, and his use of language in the stream-of-consciousness fashion is totally Joycean. Except that Beckett has obsessed with mortality. His thought is always grave. Death and guilt are the two overriding factors in his view of life. Yet this is a kind of jaunty pessimism. The archetypal Beckett is Winnie in "Happy Days," who despite misfortunes keeps a happy expression

This triple bill is not so overtly cheerful. Yet its charms are readily evident. Its sense of death-in all of the plays-is friendly. And the music of the words, chamber-played in this antechamber of death, is intended, surely, as a justification of our existence.

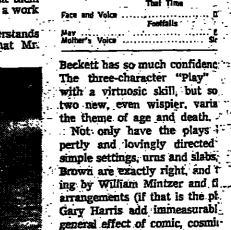

cern. Time past as a monument. Time past as a record that we were once there. The transience of a man who does not believe in permanence yet still wants to record his existence. These plays are graffiti on the walls of time. And yes, they are, like some of the plays by Edward Albee and Har-old Pinter, Beckett's followers, essen-tially verbal music. They have to be apprehended rather than compre-hended.

The plays are sparse. They can make one think of the final quartets of Bee-stretched out on the horizon of a mighty mind, and where everything is measured, watched and, in a sense, revealed.

The impression that Beckett more and more provides is one of actual experience, rather than the artistic interpretation of experience. The words drop like pebbles or rose petals. They are always coming, often in the mystic shape of music. And we confront them not so much as a work of art as a work

Opera: 'Utopia Limited'

TOPIA Limited," the next to the last comic opera created by Gilbert and Sullivan, has never had any staying power despite its considerable success at its premiere in 1893. It has just been given one of its rare revivals by the Village Light Opera Group, at the Fashion Institute Theater. Despite an inventive—perhaps too inventive production and a musically splendid performance, the work itself, heard Wednesday evening, makes clear why it has been neglected.

Gilbert's satirical target is all of England, as he shows the paradisical isle of Utopia adopting English customs and constitution. English "progress" proves to be "dull Prosperity," however, until it is remembered that the Utopians have neglected to have government by party. "Because one Party will assuredly undo all-that the other Party has done," all will be well.

The satire is, in more than one sense, insular, and the lines are seldom funny in the special deadpan Gilbertian way that they are in the best Savoy oper-ettas. The rhymes in the lyrics are conscientious rather than inspired. Sullivan's score, on the other hand, is one of his most graceful, and he has writ-ten a Mozartian-long finale to the first act that is a beauty. But if book and music are not in balance, as they are not here, the Gilbert and Sullivan for-

would come to his rescue in this situation.

The Millage Light Opera production gets to be entertaining on its if realizing the work's drill qualities, William Koch, the director and choreographer, has devised all sorts of conceits to keep the eye amused. Some will find a good many of them too broad for comfort, but they go with this kind of part amateur, part professional production. The performance is framed by two stage boxes, in one of which Queen Victoria sits, and it is she who reminds the heroine of "government by party." The sets by David Jones and costumes by Barbara Taylor Hackney are particularly handsome and clever, with ostrich feathers decorating practically everything and everybody.

Full justice is done to Sullivan's lovely score, if not always to Gilbert's tongue-twisting words. The company has a remarkable number of excellent singers who come out of the nonmusical business and professional fields. Under Ronald W. Noll's conducting, they perform better than many with professional status in the theater:

Heading the cast are Audith Inglis as the heroine, Princess Zara; Murray Nes-bitt as her father, King Paramount; Susan Neves and Vicki Owen as her sisters, and Kathleen Toner as an Eng-lish governess. A. G. Murphy and Peter Salgo are the two Wise Men, and the excellent six "imported flowers of progress" (a cross-section of England's ruling classes) are Stephen Norris, Paul Kelly, Jeffey Kurnit, John W. Behonek, John Nelson and Bobb Boyle. Remaining performances are tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon.

Forgettable Names, Familiar Film Faces

By VINCENT CANBY

You can see him this weekend as the messiah of supranational business in "Network" and as the tubby, vulgar salesman in "Silver Streak." You know his face yet you probably don't know his name, which is Ned Beatly.

Mr. Beatty is one of a number of comparatively new, very talented character and/or supporting actors who today are making even secondrate American movies easier to tolerate than would otherwise be expected.

Back in the so-called Golden Days of Hollywood, when people like Louis B. Mayer, Darryl Zanuck, Harry Cohn, Jack Warner as well as Herbert J. Yates Yates ruled their mini-empires by neans of seven-year contracts, one could as easily identify a film's studio-of-origin from the character people one

There's also the possibility that he'll suddenly become a star on his own.

Talia Shire, Sylvester Stallone's shy girlfriend in "Rocky," received fine reviews for her performances as Al Pacino's hysterical sister in the two "Godfather" films, but "Rocky" is the first film to demonstrate that she has the range of a first-class character ac-

Burt Young, the beer-guzzling, none-too-bright buddy of the title character in "Rocky," made his first mark as the Master-at-Arms in "Cinderella Liberty." Playing characters who are society's short-changed — inarticulate, fuzzy-minded, optimistic when they should be despairing, Mr. Young creates immediately identifiable figures that are an essential pat of the American landscane can landscape.

Robert Duvail, now sporting a hugely funny (and effective) English accent as Dr. Watson in "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution," gives an equally spectacular but completely different sort of per-formance in "Network" in which he plays an ice-cold New York television executive. Mr. Duvall appears to be ageless, his acting range limitless. He is so fine, in fact, that one of these days he may just become a star.

On second thought, he already is one. Though his name doesn't automatically bring people into the theater yet, nor does it take precedence on the marquee, he had the dramatic force of a star presence in every film he appears in. One of the salutary effects of the collapse of the old star system has been the erosion of the lines of demarcation between the position of the star and that of the character actor. I'm not only talking about the ease with which an actor of Olivier's stature can move from a supporting role in "The Seven-Per-Cent-Solution" (which he almost swipes from the rest of the cast) to a leading role in "Marathon Man." In effect, both roles are character roles. I'm also talking about the new freedom that allows our young leading actors to play the sort of character roles that no leading actors 30 years ago would have been caught dead playing. Dustin Hoffman, one of today's major young stars, is also one of our leading charac-ter actors on the evidence of his per-formances in "Midnight Cowboy,"

"Papillon" and "Lenny." Roy Scheider, William Devane and Gene Hackman are character actors as much as they are stars—perhaps more so. Among the dividends of "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" ad "Taxi also plays straight leads, doing brilliant work as a psychotic lover in "Alice" and as the East Village pimp in "Taxi

Performers, I suspect, cherish this new freedom to do character work. It allows them to test themselves without necessarily having the fate of the entire film depend on them. Supporting char-acter roles also allow the actor to get on and off fast, leaving a vivid impression with the least amount of time and

Though stars are frequently sought to do comparatively small, colorful character roles, like Jack Nicholson's union organizer in "The Last Tycoon," supporting character people are not often asked to step into star roles.

Diane Ladd, who played the raucous waitress in "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" and came close to stealing that film from Ellen Burstyn, barely survived a larger role in a sci-fi film called "Embryo." Both she and the movie were dreadful. She recouped her reputation by fine reviews in Broad-way's "A Texas Trilogy," but she has yet to make it as a star in films. Maybe she shouldn't try. Stars can come and go very quickly. Good character people

The Screen: Cultural Intrusion

By RICHARD EDER

HICK STRAND is a fine pho-tographer and takes good-look-ing pictures, but her films are so heavy in judgment that they all out of the screen.

In the Film Forum's survey of Miss. trand's work, the two main items are baurdly pedantic intrusions on some vely material. One tells of an Indian ussion in the Orinoco Delta; the other s the story of a poor Mexican musiian who achieves some prosperity.

The author flapse in like a great uckoo bird. She deposits her particurr cultural assumptions in these alien ests, and they hatch out with a lot of nappropriate squawking.

Her thesis is that primitive cultures

re good and that developed cultures ome in and spoil them. The thesis has ome legitimacy but it's not a matter for rawboned assertion. Miss Strand's ommand of nuance is a far remove rom Lévi-Strauss: Levi Strauss is nore like it.

In "Mosori Monika," her camera alernates between shots of the Indians a their natural habitat—fishing, pounding manioc, sitting in hammocks—and lews of a missionary station. There hey are clothed in suits and dresses, nd taught sanitation cooking with luminum pots, and the catechism. In the forest, the Indians look exraordinarily beautiful. Dressed in Vestern clothes, they look stiff and ad, and the nuns in their white habits, randishing pots, inevitably look a bit illy. And two voices are invented: a iun's voice saying patronizing things ibout the Indians, and an Indian womin recalling the beauty of the natural showing the hard rise of Anselmo Aguascalientes from barefoot Indian boy to successful leader of a band. But the camera dwells heavily on his stereo, his television set, his flush toilet. His Indian nature, the message goes, has been denatured.

In "Coses de mi Vida," there is a of of perceptive and appealing footage

Heavy Judgments

CHICK STRAND, a selection of her films, includes ANSELMO, MOSORI MODIFICA GUACAMOLE, COSAS DE MI VIDA, MAUER DE MILFUEGOS AND ELAS-TICITY, Total rusming time: 94 minutes, At the Film Forum, 15 Vandam Street, through Sunday and Dec. 16 through 19.

This is both cheap and ruinous, Using a camera to make points this way is like using a pistol to make points.

The other films are not much more successful. There is an attempt to evoke the old blood-and-death theme of bullfighting in "Guacamole," and a blackgowned young woman carries stones intended to symbolize the Latin American woman's plight, apparently—in "Mujer de Milfuegos." Both are as pretentious and contrived as an oldfashioned dance-school pageant.

The other films - a long montage of film clips from the 1940's and 50's run forward and then backward; and a very short one showing a man carrying a tube - complete the program.

'Guys and Dolls' Adds Sunday Evenings

"Gnys and Dolls," the black produc-tion of the prize-winning Abe Burrows-Frank Loesser musical, will have Sunday evening performances each week at 7:30 P.M., beginning this weekend.

The show, directed and choreographed by Bill Wilson, stars Norma Donaldson, Robert Guillaume, Ernestine Jackson and James Randolph. It is at the Broadway Theater, Broadway and-33d Street.

The Best Seafood The City Offers

EA FARE OF THE AEGEAN, that high, wide and glowingly handsome restaurant on 56th. Street between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, has been the best seafood house in this city for so long we tend to take it and its proprietor for granted when, in fact, both deserve singling out.

Starting 35 years ago in his first Seafare on Eighth Street in Greenwich Village, continuing on to a later establishment near Sutton Place, and now ensconced in his one and only restaurant, Chris Bastis remains an impeccable and indefatigable guardian of kitchen and dising room.

It would be amazing if any place as carefully maintained as this served food that fell short of excellence. The magnificent floral bouquet that's always at the entrance, the spotless walls painted a hot but velvety shade of red reminiscent of the color that appears in ancient Greek and Roman frescoes, the decorative paintings and ancient art treasures from Mr. Bastis's own formidable collection and the comfortable lighting all prepare the diner for food that equals the surroundings.

We have rarely been disappointed in the 33 years that we have been frequenting one or another of the Sea Fares. Nowhere in New York are the basic products fresher, nowhere is fish so consistently broiled, poached or fried to the right degree of doneness. Occasionally a piece of broiled fish may be overdone from having been left too long under a heat lamp by a waiter tardy in his pickups, but if sent back it is willingly replaced.

In fact, it is wanted replaced to evaluate a seafood house on only one dish, that dish would be broiled scrod. That very thick and meaty fish requires spetial skill in broiling since it is easily dried out on top before it is thoroughly cooked. On that basis alone

Oysters and clams glisten with freshness and are always as deeply ice cold as the Atlantic Ocean in June (right now the silvery slips of Canadian malpeques are the smartest choices). Soups and chowders are delicately done here, never floury, and always tasting of the fish they are based on. The New England chowder is a strong personal favorite.

In addition to the most basic fish cookery, Sea Fare offers a group of specialties, some Greek-inspired, the others creations of the horse. The most extraordinary are the poached striped bass dishes, whether in a thick, lemon gilded avgolemono sance or in a broth that is a thinner variation of that sauce. a broth that is a tunner variation of that sauce: Striped bass, Cretan style, is the lightest of all, a clear golden fish broth with snowy, moist cut's of fish and julienne slivers of carrots and celery.

SECOND REVISED EDITION 1976

Romeo Salta 30 West 56th Street (between Fifth and Sixth Avenues)

This, deservedly, is the most popular Italian restaurant in the city. The establishment is housed in a former mansion, and is spacious, luxurious, and attractive in appearance but with perhaps too many wall decorations. The open kitchen is magnificent and immaculate. The service is generally quite deft and professional, and very willing. At lunch, there are moderate-priced complete meals, Everything is à la carte at dinner, and a complete meal will inevitably be in the expensive to very expensive category of prices. Among the appetizers, there are delicious baked clams, scampi, or you might like one of the restaurant's good soups, particularly the beanand-macaroni, served on Friday. The pastas are extraordinarily good here, but the timbale is exceptionally fine, as is the "hay and straw," so called because it's prepared with green and white noodies; ask for it with tomato sauce. Half-orders are served, if you want one as a first course. Also very worthwhile is the spaghetti with clam sauce, either red or white. Among the scores of main courses, I would single out the zuppa di pesce, the seafood stew; also the stuffed veal chop; and the chicken and chicken livers prepared in what's called scarpariello style. There aren't too many desserts, but the torta mascherpone, a kind of cheesecake, is rich and delicious. The wine prices are medium, and the selection is extensive; or you may want to have the house wine, which is first rate. The espresso coffee is superb. All in all, Romeo Salta serves outstanding north Italian food, that is, without much garlic or tomato sauce; the best in New York, although the prices are very high. The restaurant is closed on Sunday; AE MC DC

BALKAN ARMENIAN 129 E 27th (W. of Lex.) 689-7925 (NEVER ON SUNDAY)

Certainly one feels no sense of deprivation when dining at the convivial Balkan-Armenian, a 64-year-old restau-rant at 129 East 27th Street between Lexington and Park

Avenues. While many of the details of the decor prove upon close scrutiny to be somewhat corny, the overall effect is pleasantly all-purpose Middle Eastern and Armenian combined. Tables topped with snowy cloths are small and a bit close, and the walters, usually friendly, can

A GRILLADE -- 845 ghth Ave. (50th-51st Sts.) 265-

The imagery of these drawings, with their tight, highly compressed patterns of chiaroscuro and their twilight color, is rich and poetic. There is a beautiful control in them, the kind of discipline and patience that comes from long ex-perience with a medium that does yield any quick successes. Yet these are drawings highly charged with feeling, indeed with passion, and the special pleasure they offer is precisely that of seeing so much emotion handled with so much control.

Twenty years ago, Miss Gechtoff was painting in the bold forms and large gestures of the abstract expressionist style. What we see in the new work is a miniaturization and concentration these impulses. She has moved in slow, painstaking stages toward this new, more inward development in her work, and the result is a very personal and solid accomplishment.

It is the kind of accomplishment that recalls us to the fact that Miss Gechtoff, who is now 50, is one of the most gifted artists of her generation. In the artists of that generation, it was never an easy decision to forego the ease and fluidity of the brush and the pal-ette knife for the slower and less showy satisfactions of the herd, sharp pencil point. But Miss Gechtoff, at least, has accomplished this change with distinction, and in the process has added something special to the art of

SoHo: Figures At an Exhibition

Paul Georges's "Around," from an exhibition by figurative artists in We are made to feel that there is an energetic pictorial mind at wor

By HILTON KRAMER

NE OF THE MOST STRIKING developments in the New York art scene in recent years has been the increased sense of community among painters and sculptors working in the figurative tradition, and the increased spirit of militancy with which they campaign for a figurative esthetic tive esthetic.

Taking their one from avant-garde groups of earlier times, these artists have organized to discuss their work and promote their own interests. They hold meetings, organize exhibitions and have even established their own galnave even established their own galleries. They have elevated the venerable practice of working directly from the observation of nature and the human figure to something akin to a religious faith, and they come before the public as true believes. public as true believers.

There is a paradox in all this, of course. The methods used by this group have long been associated with movements in radical art that met with hostility and public resistance because of the way they shocked expectations and the way they snocked expectations and threw all preceding art into question. But what prompts the figurative artists to take this new combative stance is resistance based on other grounds—above all, on the ground that what they appear to be doing is so familiar that there is no clear reason why we should be interacted in sector it done should be interested in seeing it done over and over again.

What we are seeing, I think, is a ki of avant-garde in reverse—a movement of militant votaries of tradition who vesm for the kind of moral glamour that once surrounded the efforts of a genuine avant-garde.

The great question at issue in this movement is whether the art produced. by it is any good, or—since it does not lack either gifted or ambitious artists whether enough of it is good enough to constitute the historic development that its partisons are claiming for it.

This is a question that the public will be able to decide for itself, beginning tomorrow, when a very large survey of the work of this group goes on exhibi-tion at five galleries in SoHo. Called "Artists' Choice: Figurative Art in New York," the exhibition has been organ-ized and installed by a committee of artists aided by a small grant from the New York State Council on the Arts.

The modest catalogue, which con-tains a brief introduction by Lawrence Alloway that says nothing about the art itself, lists 21 sculptors and 143 painters, each represented by a single work selected by the artists. There is a long tradition of artists banding together to mount such shows-that is what Mr. Alloway does talk about—and I have no reason to believe the propor-tion of really poor work is any higher in the current show than it ever was in

Still, the high proportion of banali-ties and ineptitudes, of woefully immature work and stupefyingly dull work, is, if not unusual, certainly disspiriting. There is no idea so old and tired, no figurative style so threadbare or exhausted, that some young acolyte of this movement has not embraced it as if it were the vital breath of life. Pic-tures of a kind one had thought—too optimistically, as it turns out—had dis-appeared from serious consideration forever quite dominate whole sections of the exhibition. There are times when a visitor has reason to feel, not that he is looking at

In the end, however, the exhi as a whole seems to lack any a point. Taken as a group, these have almost nothing in common at their interest in not painting ab paintings. IFTY-SEVENTH STREET, which art buyers are on upper Mad over the years has had its ups and downs as a contemporary art scene, is making a thunderous comeback. To be sure, it's never lacked for contemporary dealers— Betty Parsons, Pierre Matisse, Sidney Janis, Midtown, Marlborough, Pace and Emmerich, among others—who've held the line amid a welter of antique, haute couture and hairdressing establishments. But within the last two years, enough new starts have been made on 57th Street by galleries debuting or moving from other locations to assume the proportions of a trend.

Attracted by the street's re-emerging elegance, its offer of more space for less money, and yes, its spillover clientele from the fashionable stores, no less than nine new galleries have cpened or are opening there this sea-son, and almost as many are moving there from more expensive sites in the reaches of upper Madison Avenue. The Washburn Gallery, for example, will shift in February from 820 Madison to hallowed space (the former site of the Julien Levy and the Catherine Viviano galleries) at 42 East 57th, Jock Truman, long with Betty Parsons, bowed as a solo dealer this season at 38 East 57th, and Patricia Hamilton, formerly with Andrew Crispo up the street, will set up her own shop this February at 20 West 57th (a building also occupied by the Jill Kombiee and the Brooke Alexander galleries, both last season's immigrants to 57th from uptown).

The boldest leap has been made by the Martha Jackson Gallery, which has abandoned its longtime residence at 32 East 69th Street for quarters at 521 West 57th (at 10th Avenue), a building the gallery had been using for storage facilities.

As a matter of fact, the real action is on West 57th, though mainly con-fined to the block between Fifth and Sixth. So dense in art galleries has this stretch become—it boasts at least 30that a group of dealers is forming what amounts to a West 57th-Between-Fifthand-Sixth association, with an eye toward collaborating on exhibitions and advertising.

"West 57th has everything," declares Allen Frumkin, who last season moved his gallery from 41 East 57th to 50 West, the old Decca Records headquarters that's now fairly teeming with art enterprises. "Bigger space at lower rents and an attractive ambience. Besides, a lot of the people who come into the gallery are from out of town, and West 57th is very accessible."

For Rosa Esman, a pioneer in the 57th Street renaissance (two years ago she moved from East 80th Street to 29 West 57th, another hive of galleries) the street is a happy medium between Madison Avenue and SoHo. "On Madison you get half the amount of space for twice the money," she says. "And SoHo is not for me. I love it but it has much more of a carnival feeling - it's overextended."

According to Bill Judson, president of Judson Realty, which specializes in art gallery business (and pushes both 57th Street and upper Madison), the crift to 57th has something to do with the trend away from storefront gallaries "There are too II with people walking in right off the street," he says. "On Madison, the space is more expensive, compounded by the fact that galleries took store-front and second-floor space, which is

"On 57th," he adds, particularly be-tween Fifth and Sixth, a lot of the cus-tom tailors and garment firms the block was known for have departed, leaving good loft space. The rents are cheaper, partly because the galleries take upstairs floors. Upper Madison is still very strong, especially around the auction house, Sotheby Parke Bernet, but we're getting lots of dropouts from the area because it's too expensive."

And SoHo? "I don't have too much faith in it," Mr. Judson says. "There's lots of tourist business, but the serious.

He is seconded by Jock True has an unshakeable faith Street's future. "I learned m about the street years ago." when three rich matrons dr at the Betty Parsons Gallery hour between lunch and a Phil matinee. Within the hour $60,000 worth of paintings } Okada. I believe in impulse When Henri Bendel, La Grenou wit's and Tiffany's move down I'll go too."

Come Jan. 15, a nonprofit g drawings only will open at 1: Street in SoHo. Aptly named I ing Center, it's the brainchile tha Beck, who left her job a torial assistant in the Museum ern Art's Drawings Depart make her visionary project h What prompted Miss Beck

HE MEDUSA and Tutankhamen images fashioned by the jewelers and craftsmen of the early 20th century, represent brisk ness these days to at least four ison Avenue shops.

atinusiasts of such Art Nonveau and Deco workmanship are in some s buying the designs of Rene La-Louis Cartier, the Unger Brothers Liberty of London to add to colons displayed on bookshelves in living rooms. But most bauble fanare purchasing these enameled bejeweled pendants, brooches, elets, buckles, cuff links and ear-

RISTMAS GIFT

Achbee, founder of the British Guild of Handicraft. It is $12,500, An elaborate, sinuously gold-washed buckle ($1,250) is by Georges Fouquet, the Paris jeweler. From Louis Comfort Tiffany's studio comes a glass scarab. But its setting, fashioned by Tiffany &

Company, is much earlier in period.

René Lalique's designs here are not Art Nouveau but his later glass pieces. fashioned probably after World War I. There are a study in red molded glass of serpents that is hung on a silk cord ($475), a blue pressed-glass bar pin ($475) and a larger grasshopper brooch at $650. Other notable designs are an emerald and pearl necklace made by Liberty of London and a ruby-embellished transparent enamel brooch by Marcus of New York By Unger Brothers of Newark there is an assymetric silver head of a woman, a brooch that

As all collectors know, however, some of the most distinguished designs bear no marks at all, Among this shop's anonymous works are a silver floral pin at $115, a deftly conceived bat at $350 and several plique-a-jour floral studies at up to $5,500.

The Macklowe Gallery recently moved south on Madison avenue to No. 982 (near 77th Street), where it is open from 10:30 A.M. to 6 P.M., Monday through Saturday. Its windows and glass cabinets are chock full of what the owner Barbara Macklowe, believes to be one of the largest selections anywhere of vintage rings, pins, earrings, stickpins, cuff links necklaces and pracelets. You name it, she has it at from $35 to $5,000.

Who's Who of Jewelers

Here, too. the names or hallmarks read like a Who's Who of silversmiths and jewelers. There's a 40-year-old Georg Jensen deer pin at $70, several William B. Kerr designs at $150 to $250, a Liberty of London gold pin at $225 and a superb Marcus enamelled peacock brooch at $3,000. The abundance of offerings also includes early arts and craits designs made in many places from London to Chicago. And there is an intriguing selection of Egyptian-revival ornaments - including a splendid late 19th-century classic temple wrought in gold, framing an ancient Egyptian relic. It is $400.

Neil Isman, whose shop at 1100 Madison Avenue (at 83d Street) is open from 11 A.M. to 6 P.M., Monday through Saturday, is partial to Art Nou-veau. He has a variety of pins cast in silver and gold depicting strangefaced Medusas and other women at from $185 to $675.

The cnameled insects, flowers and foliage include a charming dragonfly at $100 and a sty ized floral pin with movable winglike leaves at $125. And all are executed in the plique-à-jour technique which makes enamelwork as translucent as stained glass; The bounty of buckles showing whiplash curves or women is also impressive, and selections are available at $95 and up. Designs by the Unger Brothers, a Medusa and a Joan of Arc, and several by William B. Kerr are all priced at less than $200. Most of Mr. Isman's trays are crowded with well-designed pieces that are anonymous and well-priced.

The first efforts at scholarship in this incomplete studies, including Charlotte Gere's "American and European Jewel-ry: 1830 to 1914." Alas, however, it includes nothing of Art Deco.

Art: Eagles, Eagles, Everywhere

By JOHN RUSSELL

T IS NOT in the Belgian nature to do things by halves. Marcel Brood-thaers (1924-1976) was probably the most thoroughgoing of all the European artists who set themselves to build complete environments around the time of the last Documenta exhibition in Kassel, Germany. Broodthaers wanted to recreate the whole world in relation to a single word. He chose "aigle," or eagle, and he researched in its every possible implication, from the symbolic to the ornithological. He also ransacked the cheerless little town of Aigle, in Switzerland, for every scrap of documentation that somewhere incorporated the name of Aigle. By the time we were through the tour we were not so much eagle-conscious as eagle crazy and ready to see Eagle as the brand name of every automobile in the streets and stewed eagle as the dish of the day in every restaurant.

Until Dec. 22, the John Gibson Gallery, 392 West Broadway, has what is in effect a memorial show of the graphics with which Broodthaers made a sort of living in the intervals be-tween his other activities. It offers us a summarized farewell to one of the most lovable artists of his generation: a man whose dry, purposeful humor irradiated all that he did. If he happened on an old poster that charted the attractions of the North Sea (fish, mainly) he would transform it in Duchampian style by adding just two words: CITRON for the lemon that would jerk the mussels and oysters into renewed life, and CITROEN for the tubby little family cars that trundled out to the Belgian seacoast every Sunday afternoon.

Given the image of a volcano in eruption, he carefully embellished it with a large "No Smoking" sign. Tempted by an educational print that illustrated every known form of cow, breed by breed, he updated it by renaming each animal after a favorite automobile. The understated but nonetheless paradoxical persistence of this enterprise won all hearts at the time and has not gotten less impressive

Other shows in the galleries this week: Invitational Exhibition (John Weber Gallery, 420 West Broadway): This is way above the level of most "invitational" in this context usually means "good, but we can't take too much responsibility."

Alice Aycock, for instance, is wellknown for her work in open country. Sine is half-architect, half-landscape gardener, and her work is the kind of thing that Schliemann (the one who excavated Trcy) would have done if he had gone into partnership with Count Dracula. Normally a great one for taking us below ground and cutting off every means of escape, she here shows a new project: 142 wooden posts set in concentric rings and surrounded by 12 shallow pits in which fire can be made to blaze. Just to rub it in, she reminds us of the "oak grove of the druids, near Marseilles, which was watered by human blood." Get back

All eight artists in this show are worth careful study, but I cannot reof color that are set up with such an exemplary patience by Sean Scully.

The invitation runs out on Dec. 15 so don't lose time.

Mell Daniel (Fischbach Gallery, 29 West 57th Street): Mell Daniel (1899-1975) had a very curious career. While still in his mid-teens he was recognized as an all-purpose prodigy who could do everything from line drawings for newspapers and magazines to paintings that were promising enough to be shown in 1917 by Marius de Zayas, the Castelli or Betty Parsons of the in the 1920's Daniel worked on grave, schematic, highly energized paintings of trees that had something in common with the Vorticism which had been England's chief contribution to the modern movement. We can see at the Fischbach Gallery how Daniel revised the traditional notion of the forest as "Nature's Cathedral" and turned it into Nature's equivalent of a skyscraper under construction.

Though strongly conceived and admirably carried out, these do not seem to have brought Daniel much of an income. From 1933 to 1967 he turned to the business world for a living and ended up as head of the Standard Coated Products division of the Inmont Corporation. On his retirement he returned to art, and his present memorial show is mainly of "drawings in color" done between 1967 and 1975.

So fragmented a career might have resulted in late work of a relaxed and amiable kind. But in point of fact these late Daniels are remarkable both for the density and coherence of their color and for their formal rigor. Something of Daniel's earlier arboreal preoccupation served as their point of departure; but these ribbed and heavily shadowed zigzags prove that Mell Daniel from 1933 to 1967 was not a lapsed painter, but a painter in abeyance. No history of the American avant-garde as it evolved during World War I will be complete without him, Through Dec. 31.

Michael Steiner (Andre Emmerich Gallery, 41 East 57th Street): There cannot be a sculptor who in intention is more determinedly abstract than Michael Steiner, Every piece that leaves his studio is a paradigm of up-to-theminute ambition. What hard work can do for him, it does. Yet what does he end up with? An imagery thatwhether wittingly or not-is an anthology of snouts, nozzles, vents and orifices. He can bend metal like blotting paper, pile it up piece by discrete piece, and yet always stop before the sculpture gets too big for the boudoir. Like the cardinals by Manzu which once commanded so enthusiastic an audience, Mr. Steiner's sculptures look like art but in their origins relate rather to a highbrow souvenir shop. Henry Moore in his more zoological moods did this sort of thing to perfec-tion when Mr. Steiner was in short pants. Through Jan. 5.

Recent Prints by Joan Miro (Pierre Matisse Gallery, 41 East 57th Street): If you think (and the opinion can be sustained) that Miro in his prints is often too glib for his own good, take a look at these new ones. They are gigantic. Plates quite so large can rarely have ben worked by a major artist. In particular the two litho-graphs made in Paris have an authorfar side of a football field. Through

Weekend Gardening: Weekend Gardening: Weekend Gardening: A Christmas Bulb Lights the Season

By RICHARD W. LANGER

Tis the season to be giving and re-ceiving amazylis. And with a little care the amaryllis season can last for years and years.

Properly, the front parior amaryllis is now known as a Hippenstrum, but botanical renaming aside, to your local florist it will probably always remain an amaryllis. If you're curious as to why it has been relocated in the botanical order of things, the differentiating quality between the true amaryllis, Amaryllis beliadonna, and the florist amaryllis, is that the real McCoy, from Africa, has solid stalks and tiny scales between the flower stamens while the apartment amaryllis has hollow stalks and no scales. The flowers of both are large, those of the hybrids we grow at the holiday season sometimes reaching almost a foot across.

The flowers can, in fact, be over-whelming. For that reason I tend to place an amaryllis behind all the tall indoor greenery not in bloom at this time of year. I'm not really trying to hide the plant, but half-obscured and appearing and reappearing as one moves across the room, it adds striking color to an otherwise monochromatic patch without constantly overwhelming the eye. There are times and places, of course, where an amaryllis really should stand alone, as a table centerpiece, say, or solitary on a candlestand.

Whatever your preference for placement, the care of an amaryllis remains the same. Assuming your plant is either in bloom already of just about to erupt into those antique-Victrola-like trum-pets, keep the soil evenly moist. Since the amaryllis must be grown in a very small pot to force the bloom, this may mean, in some dry apartments, water ing as often as once a day. Water until the excess runs out at the bottom of the pot. Then drain off the extra in the saucer to avoid soggy soil.

Give the pot a quarter turn daily.

The plant will grow toward the light; given a week or two of facing the same direction, the amaryllis may lean toward the window to such a precarious degree that once flowers open, the whole affair topples over like a leaning Tower of Pisa with radar scopes on

Although amaryllis likes a warm location, the flowers will last much long-er if nighttime temperatures do not go above 55 degrees. Even with the landlords cutting back on the supply of heat, providing for this can be a difficult proposition in the typically overheated apartment. However, by putting the pot right up against the window, without letting the plant itself actually touch the glass, a comfortably cool night environment can be created.

The amaryllis, bought potted up from the florist, will bloom almost without fail. The trick is getting it to repeat the show for another year. With a little attention, however, your chances of success should be very good.

Once a flower fades, cut the stem off right below the flower. A few days later, cut the remaining scape, or flow-er stem, down to within an inch or two of the bulb itself. It may ooze a bit,

The New Haven Bicentennial Committee has organized a do-it-yourself walking tour of the green, its churches and the historic buildings that face on it. This week, the tour is available today, between 11 A.M. and 4 P.M. The guide is a recording in a hand-held casette player, available for $3.50, at the Bicentennial Committee's information office, 157 Church Street, opposite the green. The recording lasts a little over an hour, and there is no limit to the number of people on such a tour. Parts of Yale University are included on the tour since the University was first built at the western edge of the green and has spread westward over the years. But more extensive guided tours of the school are made available by the university, at no charge. Tours of the main campus start today at 10

Entertainment

For many years New Haven had been tryout town for the theater. But today it has a flourishing theater life of its own that is a far cry from the Broadway proving grounds of yesteryear. New Haven is now a place where original drama is combined with classical repertory at two first-rate theaters that have attracted enthusiastic regional audiences in their own right.

At the Long Wharf Theater, on Frontage Road at Exit 46 off the Connecticut. Turnpike (203) 787-4282, Lillian Hellman's "Autumn Garden" will have its final performance at 8 P.M. At the Yale Repertory Theater, housed in an old church building at 1120 Chapel Street (203) 436-1600, Chekhov's "Ivanov" is playing tonight at 8 P.M. and tomorrow at 2 P.M. and 8:30 P.M.

For jazz fans, the Yale Jazz ensemble offers free concerts on Sunday nights starting at 8:30 P.M. in Sprague Half, at College and Wall Streets. There is also live jazz on Friday and Saturday nights at Casa Marra, 321 East Street, (203) 777-5148, and at the Founder Cafe, 104 Audubon Street, (203) 776-5144. At Erica, 532 State Street, (203) 624-8255, there is live jazz every night. There is a cover charge of a dellar or two there, depending on who is playing, and a bar minimum of $2.50 at the Foundry Cafe. At all three places the jazz musicians usually get started by 9:30 P.M., and play till closing time, on Saturday at I A.M., and other weekend days at 2 A.M. The Yale School of Music will offer some treats this weekend: tonight, the Yale Philharmonia, consisting of musiclans from the graduate school, will

Eating and Shopping

The city has a cosmopolitan spirit which is reflected in many of its restaurants such as Basel's, at 993 State Street, (203) 624-9361, with Greek cuisine and wines and dancing to bouzouki music tonight and tomorrow night; Fat Taco, at 376 Elm Street (203) 787-0669, where Mexican dishes are

Where to Go to Cut Your Own Tree for Christmas

By HAROLD FABER

The first snow of the winter has fallen, adding a touch of Currier & Ives to the landscape on the Christmas-tree farms to the north, now awaiting the annual influx of visitors from the metropolitan area who come to pick and cut their own trees for the holidays.

This weekend-and every weekend until Christmas-a stream of families will be driving to the countryside to relive one element of the storybook version of "A Real Old-fashioned Christmas": going into the woods and cutting down the tree of their choice. Trees cut now will last until Christmas, given proper care.

Within two hours of Times Squarein the Hudson Valley, in Connecticut and Northern New Jersey-more than a score of tree farms are now open, offering a wide selection of pine, spruce and fir trees for nostalgic doit-vourselfers.

A small, but increasing number of the 30 million Christmas trees sold each year in the United States is being harvested by those whose choose and cut their own trees, according to estimates by forestry experts at the State College of Agriculture and Life Sci-ences at Cornell University.

Destiny in the Living Room "People seldom realize that a Christmas tree is not a timber tree whose aspirations have been frustrated by an untimely demise," according to a Cornell University booklet called "Selection and Care of Your Christmas Tree." "It is realizing its appointed destiny as a living room centerpiece symbolic of 'man's mystic union with nature."

To help the trees meet their ap-pointed destiny, a small but thriving industry has arisen, consisting of growers who plant trees specifically for amateur seasonal cutters. In New York State, the Christmas Tree Growers Association has 231 members; it exhibits champion trees at the state fair in Syracuse and puts out a quarterly trade bulletin for members.

For many of the association members, the growing and selling of Christ-mas trees is a hobby and a service to the holiday feelings of city dwellers and children as well as a profit-making operation. 'It's wonderful to see the family groups, the buses with nursery school children and others who come to cut their own trees," said one association member, Floyd Cook, who operates a tree farm in Hyde Park in Dutchess

For those who are planning a trip to a tree farm, the state foresters at the office of the State Department of Environmental Conservation here offer the following advice: Call ahead for directions, weather conditions and prices. Dress warmly and wear boots, as weather conditions vary considerably the farther north you go. It can be as much as 10 degrees colder out in

Most farms provide saws for cutting down the tree; ask when you call. Most farms prohibit the use of axes; it's too dangerous and it leaves unsightly

Bring a tape measure, especially if the farmer charges by the foot for his trees. Make sure you pick a tree that is less than the height of your ceiling don't waste money by buying a tree that has to be cut down when

Bring a rope to tie the tree to your A Range of Prices

The price for trees this year is roughly the same as last year, although some growers have raised it slightly. Many growers charge one price for any tree you choose and cut. The price range for a Norway Spruce, white spruce or Scotch pine of from 6 to 10 feet is between $5 and $15, according to the forestry experts. They say that Douglas fir, blue spruce, balsam fir and some other species are more ex-

In New York, Christmas trees for sale can be divided into two groups: the short-needle spruces and firs and the long-needle pines. White spruces drop their needles readily when drying; pines do not.

The state foresters here advises that Scotch pines are the best sellers for New York because they retain their needles longer. The worst trees for needle retention are spruces, although many people prefer them because of their appearance. The balsam firs and the Douglas firs are somewhere in between.

Make certain the tree you pick is a healthy green, blue or gray-green; look for a tree with a good single tip, not a double tip, and a tree with an abso-lutely straight stem without crooks. The ideal Christmas tree should have good needle-holding ability, attractive color, a full or bushy appearance, a conical symmetrical shape, a pleasing fragrance, branches sturdy enough to hold ornaments and gifts and reasonable fire resistance, according to the Cornell booklet.

Mr. Cook the tree farmer, offered the following advice: "Put the tree in warm water as soon as you get home. and keep it outside until you are ready to put it up in your house. The idea is to keep the water going up into the needles. If you do, the trees will keep and give off a beautiful fragrance."

When you are ready to put the tree up indoors, Mr. Cook recommends cut-ting one inch off the stump and putting the tree into a stand that provides warm water constantly.

To minimize the hazard of fire, remember to: Put the tree in the coolest part of the room, away from the fireplace, radiators, air ducts and television sets, all of which can dry the needles.

Use only fireproof decorations and light reflectors; avoid using candles.

bulbs and possible short circuits before putting them on the tree. Avoid overloading the circuits, if a fuse blows, it means the line is over-loaded or attached to defective equipment, Replace the equipment; do not replace the fuse with a larger one. Unplug the lights even if you are leaving the room for only 10 minutes. A Guide To The Tree Farms

A Burst of Handel About Town

and no play has invited a similar flurry of activity from the highest professional level to the most comfortably ama-

This is a popularity that has survived changes of fashion that have withered lesser works (Mendelssohn's overtly imitative oratorios, for instance). "Messiah" was warmly greeted from its first performances in Dublin-"The Sublime, the Grand, and the Tender, adapted to the most elevated, majestick and moving Words, conspired to transport and charm the ravished Heart and Ear," wrote the Dublin Journal on April 17, 1742. And although it took a few years to catch hold firmly in England, it has been a worldwide favorite ever

Why "Messiah"?

The big question is why this should be the case. Handel wrote many other oratorios himself, after all, and other composers have contributed still more. Why has "Messiah" stood so far above the rest?

One answer is that it is simply better than its competition, But ultimately such judgments are subjective and hence indefensible. No doubt there are people lurking somewhere in dark cor-ners who can plausibly explain why "Messiah" is really quite second rate. But for most of us, the level of inspiration seems quite astonishingly high. It is remarkable how a good performance of the work seems to sweep from high point to familiar high point. Certainly, the "Mallelujah" chorus and other memorable moments stick out. But there are very few pieces in the entire oratorio that don't blossom if properly executed.

Other than notions of divine inspiration striking once and once only, there are reasons why "Messiah" is constructed and shaped as it is. The piece fell at a moment in Handel's career, after his success as a composer of Italian operas had passed, in which disparate strands of influences came together for one time only. As Winton Dean, the British Handelian, puts it; " 'Messiah' is a compound of three distinct styles, those of the English anthem, the German Passion, and the dramatic oratorio. Though very successful, this balance could not be repeated, and Handel never made the attempt; it is not a beginning but an end."

The main reason seems to be that Handel was not by nature a religious composer, and that he found it difficult to balance pious sentiments and drama.

A Peculiar Blend

The peculiar blend of influences that went into "Messiah" made it ideal for the British (and American) religious' and musical sensibilities. The sturdy piety of the text struck a chord. And the predominance of choruses, brilliant enough for professionals but broad enough for amateurs, ensured it a place in the repertoires of thousands of churches. Even the solo parts, while searching and profound, were not necessarily composed with the brilliant vocal instruments of Italian opera singers and castratos in mind. Much of Handel's operatic music has been rendered problematic today because hardly anybody can sing it; the "Messiah" arias flatter great modern singers without intimidating lesser ones.

This feeling of participation in a performance derives in part from the communal traditions of English and German Protestanism, but it also owes semething significant to the populist simplicity and sheer familiarity of the "Messiah" music. The Avery Fisher Hall "Messiah" sing ins are only the latest New York manifestation of everybody's desire to sing along; this reporter recalls a friend in California who had an annual holi-day "Messiah" sing-in party in her liv-ing room—a performance that in-creased in vigor and confidence as spirits were imbibed-and surely there are numerous such gatherings planned this season in metropolitan New York.

If "Messiah" got its start in Englishspeaking countries, it long since crossed linguistic borders. The work soon caught on in Handel's native Germany, where it is sung steadily in a German translation. In fact, almost anywhere you go you may come across a performance in some foreign language, although the further you may wander from the centers of Western music, the more likely the performance will be associated with a church rather than with a professional musical institu-tion, and hence will have been inspired

This observer recalls one of his great concert-going experiences to have been a complete performance of "Messiah" sung in Chinese by the First Evangelical Free Church Choir of Los Angeles. Fortunately the same forces recorded their version (with piano and organ accompaniment, but you can't have everything), although it was never made available through normal commercial channels.

One of the fascinations in considering "Messiah's" popularity over the past 234 years is to realize that there is no one "Messiah." Handel himself directed performances of the work between 1742 and 1759, and he was always fussing with it, both to improve it but most often to adjust it to the forces at hand. The result is that there are up to three and four versions of many of the important arias and choruses, and there can never be one uni-versally agreed-upon "standard" "Mes-

A further cause of variance from one "Messiah" performance to the next has to do with the instrumentation and scale of the forces involved. Musicological self-consciousness in the performance of Western music is a relatively recent thing, and one that has only become widespread since the end of World War IL Before then, and especially through the 19th century, the size of the forces used to perform "Messiah" expanded as the orchestraand hall sizes themselves grew.

Mozart made an arrangement of "Messiah" designed to accommodate late-18th century predilection for wind parts, and his version has even been recorded by Deutsche Grammophon. Throughout the past century "Messiah" forces grew and grew, reaching an ele-phantine apotheosis late in the century with massed Victorian displays employing choruses in the thousands. For some, "Messlah" still doesn't sound "right" unless the tempos are lugubrious and the choral tone weighty and

Toward the Small

In our own century, and particularly in the last 25 years, there has been a decided reaction toward performances using small, flexible forces, original instruments, quick tempos and proper period ornamentation. So far has this tendency gone now that a counter-reactionary British reviewer could begin his report on Neville Marriner's new version on Argo (of Han-del's London score of 1743) with the following sentences: "The process of emasculating Handel, which has recently gained such startling momentum, is here carried a significant stage further. This recording . . . presents Handel as a lightweight composer, lacking in majesty, depth of feeling, spirituality and emotional power. On this showing he was brilliant, amiable, much concerned with pretty effects and quite (for some odd reason) preceding generations of interpreters have contrived to find in him." It's nice to see that the old warhorse can still arouse such guessing-games of what versions of which arias are being used that keeps. critics interested in the piece. Critics and any compulsive concertgoer encounter many works with a dogged regularity, and some of them simply don't bear that kind of repetition.

"Messiah" does. Of course an ineffectual or misguidedly pious performance can sap it of interest. But given an even decent effort from the stage, the work invariably has the power to move the listener, deeply. It's an extraordi-nary piece of music, and now is the season when anyone can encounter it

For those accustomed to craning their necks to see the stars; galaxies and constellations on the dome of a planetarium, there is an alternative—the sky. This Sunday night, the Amateur Oh-servers' Society of New York City is sponsoring an evening of stargazing at Caumsett State Park on Lloyd Neck, L.L. Forty miles from the bright lights, smoke and haze of the city, the park is considered an ideal place to watch the Geminid meteor shower, an astro-

The show this Sunday night is the shower of meteors that emanates from the constellation Gemini, the twins. According to Joseph Rao, the chairman of the amateur observers group, the Geminid show is one of the most reliable meteor showers of the year. Looking overhead and into the east between 8 P.M. and 11 P.M., an observer at the Caumsett site might see 20 to 40 meteors an hour, while a city observer might see five to 10 an hour.

Aside from the naked eye (which on a clear and dark night needs almost no help) the Long Island stargazers will have at their disposal a wide array of telescopes, binoculars and cameras for viewing and recording the sky show. The equipment is supplied by members of the observers' society, a group devoted to what they call the world's oldest scientific hobby (astronomy being the oldest science). Society members also will provide the narrative for sing on abovedescriptive literature and

John J. Cahill, the regional park

Ode to Joy! It's Beethoven's birth-day. An occasion for celebration by— who else—the Beethoven Society. The official date is Dec. 16, but the society will honor the 206th anniversary of its hero's birth Sunday with a concert at 3 P.M. Instead of featuring the com-poser's familiar masterpieces, the adventurous society has put together a program of rarely performed early works (1785-88), created before Beeworks (1785-88), created before Beethoven left his native Bonn and settled in Vienna. The concert will be preceded by a slide show starring another devoted Beethoven fan—Schroeder, the "Moonlight Sonata" player in the "Peanuts" comic strip. The birthday party will be held in the anditorium of the Martin Luther King in High of the Martin Luther King Jr. High School on Amsterdam Avenue, be-tween 65th and 66th Streets. Admission is $3. And white you're there, you can visit the Ben Shahn retrospective, too. The Museum Shop's holiday supplies also include some unusual items: a limited edition brass dreidel paperweight for $40; a bronze reproduction of a medieval oilburning lamp for $25; and a modern-looking brass menorah for $80. And for children, there are all sorts of toys and games and even a hand puppet ($3), imported from Israel, of Judah Maccabee, the Hanukkah hero. its inventor) between 54th and 55th Streets, Between 52d and 53d Streets, there will be puppets to goggle at. There'll also be caroling and other singing, too, on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral at 51st Street, And Santa Olaus will dispense cheer and, as long as they last, candy bars on a wagon be-tween 46th and 47th Street.

Movable Feats

Between 44th and 45th Streets, a "skate-mobile" will sanction the only sort of wheeled traffic on Fifth during the open-house hours of the ad hoc mail. A few blocks south, at 41st Street, between the handsomely refurbished lions on the majestic stone steps of the New York Public Library, visitors can cool their heels, or tap their toes, to more of the performing arts.

A "puppet-mobile" and a trampo-line will be provided for public amusement at 38th Street. Finally, or at the outset, depending on your course, north or south, between 34th and 35th Street, a Wurlitzer Band Organ will give a continuous concert of rousing, thunderous band music.

The entertainment will draw from an infinite variety of city cultural resources: The Renaissance Street Singers (patrolling the avenue both Sundays), the New York Grand Opera Singers at St. Patrick's at 1:15 this Sunday, Israeli and Ukrainian dance troupes at 54th Street this Sunday from 1:45 to 2:45 P.M.

The Open Doors.

Among the stores that will open their doors in anticipated jingling of cash registers will be Lord & Taylor, W. & J. Sloage, Wallach's and Bouwit Teller, Korvette, Saks Fifth Avenue and B. Altman.

The special Sunday malls might be enough to satisfy lesser streets, but at holiday time, Fifth Avenue becomes a splurge of color and commercial joility from morning until late at night. It's windows are hung with care in hopes that St. Nicholas, and those who rol-low in his footsteps, will soon be there.

The more ambitious storefronts are planned with a lead time rivaling those preceding the landings in Normandy and the designers strive to outdo themselves each successive year.
Fifth Avenue may not have the style and the elegance of ancient years, when it was the preserve of the wellheeled and the aristocracy. It has fine stores but it has also become the longest airline ticket counter in the West-ern World and, below 42d Street, it is dotted with stores that seem to be constantly announcing that they are going out of business.

With all this, it is still considered by many as the finest street in the city and the place to stroll. As though common agreement, it preserves the bouquet of a street of classic dis--and this concept works. It is a street that somehow erases shabbiness and oppressive thoughts of mu-nicipal insolvency (even with vacant stores in the 30's). Perhaps it is more because of the people than of the merchandise on it. Yet there can be little debate that at this time of year, both people and property glow on Fifth Avenue. A walk on any day offers testimony. Particularly, the evidence of the windows.

F.A.O. Schwarz

At 58th Street, the southeast corner is so thronged that one immediately thinks in terms of an accident. It is not an accident. It is F.A.O. Schwarz, the Rolls-Royce of toy stores, with its usual fabulous holiday window display. The largest window, its strong pane resisting the pressed noses of thousands of youngsters, is filled with an immense small-scale town plaza and street. It is lined with houses of the Hans Christian Andersen school of architecture and absolutely alive with activity.

The animated scene is peopled, if that is the correct word, with dolls—bear dolls, rabbit dolls, monkey dolls—all sorts of dolls. There are dolls washing windows, dolls working in a manhole, dolls watering flowers, carpenter dolls working on a balcony, worker dolls shoving a load of pipes up a ramp, and one neer-do-well drunken doll dangling a bottle out of a window...

In a smaller window, a 17th-century dollhouse, immaculately crafted, is filled with upper-class figures doing some sort of stately dance and other-wise disporting themselves on the most elegant of premises. Nearby, in yet another window, a little train endlessly circles, while not far away four Santas mounted on a giraffe or what have you, make the rounds on a fast-moving

Tiffany Onward

The Fifth Avenue windows of Tiffany & Company, at 57th Street, are dressed in a serious Christmas tradition. The figures, done in stuffed fabrics, represent a Madonna and child and an angel. No diamonds here. The arood changes in the 57th Street windows, where a cave has been fashioned from strings of popcorn, and a large doll, taking off on Whistler's mother, knits a Santa Claus in a rocking chair. On the next corner, 56th Street, Bonwit Teller is observing the holidays by changing the windows every Wednesday night, becoming they say, more Christmasy as the season reaches a crescendo. At Cartier's, on the corner of 52d Street, two happy little winter scenes in the windows depict good times in a snowy woods; it's all made of fabrics and shows a horse pulling a sled while human figures dance with the sheer loy of the season. On the West side of Fifth Avenue, the Tishman building No. 566, be-tween 52d and 53d Streets is fronted by long tapestry-like, green-oulbed ver-tical columns that only add luster to the street.

As you walk, you are constantly within the sound of music, it seems, whether the orchestrations of Salvation Army bands or the performances by those hungry-looking young musicians who appeal for subsidy from peripatetic music lovers pausing to admire their renditions of classic works. You will notice also that this year's Santa Clauses are rather thin fellows, a condition that may derive from the state of the economy or the constant preoccupation with overweight:

Rockefeller Center

At 50th Street, your attention is caught in a crossfire of attractions. To the west, the Rockefeller Center Christmas tree—a 68-foot-high affair of two or three tons—towers over the skating rink, a-sparkle with thousands of multicolor miniature bulbs. It's turned ondaily from 8 A.M. to 11 P.M. The herald angels, trumpets at the ready, preside over the lit evergreens trees in the Channel Gardens leading up to the rink.

Saks

To the east, Saks Fifth Avenue has also donned its holiday makeup. Lacquered red awnings hang, like gaudy eyelids, over the six center windows that represent various rooms of a New York apartment—not a housing-project apartment, perhaps not even a mid-die-income apartment, but a very, very nice apartment indeed.

The pavement-pounder leaves this lap of luxury and continues downtown. At 49th Street, on the southwest corner, the Swiss Center—an Alpine enclave housing tourist, airline, banking and other offices—is back working on the railroad. It's new exhibit, one that centers on trains, as the past ones have—and they were a smash hit, too.

At No. 590, near 47th Street, the Irish tourist people have a modest but eyecatching window, "Ireland's Wel-coming Doors," which actually shows a half-opened door with a Santa lurking within. Across the street, at Korvette's, the decor is fairly functional but this is where Santa will be stationed on those two Sundays and it is where many of Santa's helpers will be doing their field

At 48th Street one has already passed the big golden bells and robust choir boy figures; at the Dime Savings Bank of New York. At 44th Street, the Bankers Trust affords an interior view where there are countless dolls in serried ranks, not in the window (this would not be in a banking tradition, probably) but on the main floor.

Iberia Airlines of Spain, in its window at No. 565, at 46th Street, has recalled the spiritual inspiration of Christmas with a nativity scene, one of the few that is making no hard sells on the avenue.

Lord & Taylor

The spectacle continues on a course that rises and falls as it moves southward. Between 38th and 39th Streets, the window extravaganza again peaks ar Lord & Taylor. Here is the only window show that is geared for a line, with rones and stanchions that provi for an orderly flow of onlookers.

If you start at the 38th Street end of the building front, you will have the chronology correct in this depiction of the store's history and movement from the Lower East Side to its present eminence. The four stores that constitute this commercial saga are charmingly reproduced in miniature in as many windows.

First comes the original, an outside view of 47 Catherine Street, which reigned from 1826 to 1853. Mr. Lord and Mr. Taylor are there, bowing and turning the head. A man on a ladder is hanging a wreath and one gets a sense of old New York, Store No. 2 at Grand Street and Broadway (1860-1873) has a touch more of class than No. I does. There is a nurse with a pram, a woman trying on an evening gown and a husband reading the stock market listings. On to Store No. 3. Broadway and 20th Street (1873-1914) and a photographer with black cloth over his head has his primitive flash gun at the ready and an elevator takes the customers to the two fully laid out floors in the scene. Store No. 4, the one in which this fascinating display is currently housed, is shown as it was in 1914, as New Yorkers prepared for Christmas while

B. Altman

Europe was destroying itself in war...

But enough of nostaigh. Altman's is beckoning down the avenue, between, 34th and 35th Streets. Altman's production this year fills six large windows and is called "The Day the Children Saved Christinas." It's a traffic-stopper.

Briefly, the tale, as told over loudspeaker units that narrate from the proper window in sequence, concerns Jim and Jill, who visits Santa-at the North Pole on Christmas Eve only to find that the old gent cannot be found. He must be found if Christmas is to go off on schedule.

Window I shows Santa's home. Mrs. Santa is sitting in a chair. Santa's head pops out of a trap loor but cannot be seen by the visitors. Very ingenious, altogether. When the house door opens, the wind even blows the rug up. Jim and Jill travel the world to find Santa. In Window 2 they are at the Ice Palace, a silvery setting dominated by the Snow Queen.

By Window 3 they have traveled by raft to the tropics, where startling looking creatures—a hippo, a chimpanzee, a gorilla—can give them no clue. Lion Land dominates Window 4, showing our heroes on a magic carpet being greeted by an elephant, a camel and the King of Beasts, looking rather comfortable as a tiger cools him with a Window 5 may be the most colorful of all of these bright panels. It takes us "Under the Sea" and the atmosphere is bubbly and fishy, enhanced by Ms. Mermaid who would like to get back to being a full-time girl. By Window 6, we are back at the house, where Santa has been unearthed and a party is un-

YNTHESIZED versions of classical music fall into the "classical" category when the trade magazines assemble their sales charts. But by any generous definition of popular musicmusic that is popular—the most commercially successful of these ventures qualify as pop.

Normal classical records sell nowhere near so many copies as even a modestly successful pop record. If a classical record sells 10,000 copies in its first year, it's done very well indeed. Since good classical disks sell steadily for longer than boomand-bust pop disks do, a solidly successful classical disk can expect to sell up to 20,000 in the long run. Compare that to the plethora of gold ($1 million in sales) and platinum (a million copies sold) pop records, and you begin to get some idea of the discrepancy between the two markets.

Synthesized versions of the classics boast sales figures that rival all but the gold and platinum pop records. The current sales champion is Isao Tomita. who was born in Tokyo in 1932. Mr. Tomita (or "Tomita," as he is generally known) has put out three records on RCA before his current release. The most successful of them, a Debussy melange called "Snowflakes Are Dancing," has sold some 250,000 copies so far in this country alone. His two other synthesized disks—one of Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" and the other of music by Stravinsky, Mussorgsky and Debussy-haven't done quite so well, but altogether Tomita has sold over a half a million records in the United States (international sales figures are hard to come by, says RCA, but they would appreciably swell the total).

One can thus call these records—by Tomita, by Walter Carlos and by several others—popular music on a purely statistical basis. Judging by other record sales figures, there simply aren't that many "real" buyers around to account for a 250,000 sales figure. When a "classical" record sells that many, it has clearly "crossed over," in pop parlance, into the pop-music audience.
What makes this interesting to those of us who like both classical music and popular music is that a lot of these Tomita-buyers would never dream of buyying a "real" classical record. There is something about synthesized versions of the classics that makes them more accessible-more popular-than the originals. The questions are, what is that something, and are synthesized versions as artistically valid as the originals?

The answers can be based on two recent releases

both synthesized versions of Gustav Holst's suite of astrologically oriented tone poems, One is by Tomita himself, on RCA; the other is by a San Francisco-based synthesizer specialist, Patrick Gleeson: on Mercury.

"The Planets" in its original guise has enjoyed a dubious new life recently as greedy record execu-tives tried to hype it as hip because of its astrological connotations. Actually, something less hip could hardly be imagined; these are ponderous late Romantic large-orchestra musings, heavy and

As such, however, they make the classical-music-lover less concerned about their bastardization by the synthesizer wizards than more honorable music (e.g., Bach). Ultimately, nobody much cores if Holst is distorted.

And distorted he is, in both of these versions. Synthesizer arrangements are either designed to be played live, in which case they amount to little more than souped-up electronic-organ transcriptions, or they are pieced together in the studio, which allows for a good deal more complexity, but often entails a sterile, rigid mechanical phrasing.

Beyond that, the arranger has to decide how faithful he wants to be. Is he going to reproduce a synthesized equivalent for every instrumental part and ensemble effect in the original? Is he going to concentrate on the "essentials"? Or is he, to a greater or lesser extent, going to spin out a free fantasy on the original, full of spacey, sci-fi special effects? Mr. Gleeson calls his version "an electronic portrait" and Tomita calls his "electronically per-formed." The actual issues of fidelity versus freedom are the reverse of those descriptions. Tomita is much freer. Mr. Gleeson's version is quite samply less interesting (unless you count fidelity a virtue, in which case you wouldn't touch either of these recrods), relatively thin and artificial in texture. Tomita has a real gift for exotic effects, both applied onto Holst and in the realization of Holst's actual notes. People will presumably buy this record because they think it's new and far out, because they want a high-fidedity showpiece, or because they find clas-

Publishing: More 'Black Boy'

By HERBERT MITGANG

ICHARD WRIGHT'S "Black Boy" is generally considered one of the classic autobiographical accounts of the black experience in the South during the first quarter of this century—the South of Jim Crow instead of Jimmy Carter. Its final paragraph went:

"With ever watchful eyes and bearing scars, I headed North, full of a hazy notion that life could be lived with dignity, that the personalities of others should not be violated, that men should be able to confront other men without fear or shame, and that if men were lucky in their living on earth they might win some redeeming meaning for their having struggled and suffered here beneath the stars."

The book ended on that upbeat, affirmative note by an accident of publishing. The real reasons are lost in the minds and motives of editors, agents, book clubs and the late author himself. Long after the book's first publication in 1945, it now comes out that "Black Boy" was only half a story, and the second half of "Black Boy" will be published next spring by Harper & Row with the title "American Hunger."

Wright and his editor, Edward Aswell of Harper, agreed that the book would break more logically with his departure from the South and that the remaining material could be held for a further autobiographical work. Even though the second half had already been set in type and advanced to the page-proof stage, it was deleted. Wright then wrote new concluding pages to round off "Black Boy" and gave it a more optimistic interpretation.

The first half of the book became a dual selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club in 1945. But, according to Michel Fabre, a Wright scholar, it is not clear whether the book club accepted "Black Boy" on the condition that it would include only Wright's experience in the South or whether the decision to divide the book was worked out solely between Wright and his editor. There appear to be no villains, as the author was in agreement and pleased with the popular success of the book, which continues in hard-cover and paperback editions to this day.

"American Hunger" moves between Chicago and Harlem, providing a picture of Wright's life between 1927 and 1937. He describes his difficult time as a store clerk and dishwasher in the Depression years, an experience shared by many other black and white Americans.

The story covers his entry into the literary atmosphere of the John Reed Clubs and the politically torn Communist. Party. His break with the party and his tortured period of ostracism give "American Hunger" a significant historical framework. The account of his distillusionment with the Communist Party is familiar to readers of the chap-

The Cambridge historian J. H. Plumb calls her "the splendid Kate Simon, the incomparable Kate Simon, whom no one has ever rivaled in the long-long history of guidebooks . . . she has made one of the dullest forms of literature a brilliant work of art."

Miss Simon's "Places and Pleasures" travel books have covered Rome, Paris and London, as well as stopovers at "The Places in Between" in Italy and in "England's Pleasant Land." Many a native New Yorker has learned about overlooked backyard treasures from her "New York: Places and Pleasures."

Now the splendid Kate discloses that she is writing what could be her most challenging book, a sort of social historial the United States built around the story of Fifth Avenue. She's playing with such titles as "Fifth Avenue: Sketches in Gold and Baser Metals" or, perhaps, "Fifth Avenue: Rise and Decline." That's the idea if anyone wants to improve on it.

Her book begins in Washington Square in the 1820's, when it was Potter's Field and a hanging ground. continues through the era of the industrial magnates who built mansions on the avenue with their railroad, copper and mining money; includes their wives, who flaunted that money because they had it in untaxed dollars; takes note of the art dealers and decorators and architects who served as dictators of fashion, and carries forward to today's more private life behind luxurious apartment buildings.

That's only the half of it, Miss Simon says, strolling and typing, so that she can finish the book in the spring for publication by Harcourt Brace Jovanovich late next year.

The name of a publisher called Hopkinson & Blake of New York conjures up images of the venerable British publishing houses, such as our favoritenamed, Chatto & Windus. We imagine the editors there drinking port and smoking real Havanas and complaining about their authors after a late lunch at the Connaught Grill.

Hopkinson & Blake specializes in putting out books dealing with motion pictures and selling to the college market where everybody nowadays is "into film." The house's most recent book, "The Art of Alfred Hitchcock," by Donald Spoto, with a preface by Princess Grace of Monaco, has been adopted for February by the Literary Guild.

Hopkinson & Blake turns out to be a middle-aged lad from Brooklyn named Len Karlin. "I started the house nine years ago," he says. "Hopkinson & Blake is named after the street corners in Brownsville where I held down a spot selling newspapers during the Depression."

DRY BONES: Israel's Comit. Strip. By Yazkov Kirschen, Cherry field. Associates. 129 pp. $2.50.

A runaway best seller in Israel, where Dry Bones is as popular a comic strip as Peanuts is in the States, this compilation of Yaakov Kirschen's cartoons is captivating. Kirschen, formerly an American cartoonist for Playboy and now a Jerusalemite, really gets at the Israeli view of things, from the pains and nuisances of daily life to deeper feelings of anguish and frustration at UN hypocrisy and PLO terrorism. His humor is wry, mocking and affectionate.

A real sense of Israel emerges from this witty and hilarious book—above all, a sense of the underlying compassion and feeling for justice of the Jewish State and its resilient citizens. The book can be obtained by mail ($2.50 including postage) from Murray S. Greenfield, 21 West 39th Street, New York, New York 10018.

Norman Mailer, at work on new book "Do 1 still have enough skill left to bring it off?"

"There is a fancy wistfulness about writers in their 50's," Norman Mailer says. "They wonder, 'Do I still have enough skill left to bring it off?"

On Jan, 31, Norman Mailer will be 54. After being away from fiction for a decade, he says that he is working steadily and well now on his big novel -the biggest for him and one of the longest planned by any American writer, past or present.

He is still surprisingly youthful. As always, he appears almost elegant: an old rifleman in an officer's trenchcoat. His stance remains open. He hesitates for a modest moment between sentences, then comes out of a neutral corner with an uppercut to the mind. "This is a tricky business," he says of the challenge of writing like a heavyweight again. "The trick is to go beyond one's

Most of the time he is in Provincetown, Mass., putting in two and a half hours in the morning and another two and a half in the evening. When he completes the work in 1978 or 1979, it could go between 550,000 and 800,000

Ned Bradford, his editor at Little, Brown in Boston, says that Mr. Mailer seems to be going along systematically on the novel and has written more than 175,000 words. He also stressed that one book but for "the work"-which could be for anywhere from two to four novels, depending on natural breaks.

"I'm writing about Egypt in the 20th dynasty, 1130 B.C.," Mr. Mailer says. Why? Because I Fell through a novelistic hole. I thought I would dip into the period and then it began to absorb me. I went to Egypt once, but didn't get much out of the trip. Both Cairo and the Pyramids were impossibly

"Actually, the first third of the book takes place in Egypt, the second third on a spaceship, the last third is contemporary."

The Egyptian dynasty comes from research, the space world is not unfamiliar to him since he wrote "Of a Fire on the Moon," and the contemporary life he has lived fully.

"I've been possessed with the commdram of time ever since I started writing novels," Mr. Mailer continues, "But I'm not doing this mechanically. There have been some mistaken reports that I was going to follow a Jewish family from the time of the Pharaohs, but the characters and events are still evolving.

"I know it's dangerous to characterize what I'm trying to do, but I want the novel to be a consistent explana-tion of time. What I'm trying to do is more abstract than realistic-and endlessly more pompous."

Mr. Mailer contends that writing is a dangerous occupation, especially if your situation is such that "you have to keep the bread coming in." With more charm than despair, he notes that he has had more publishers than ex-wives: six to five. He has seven chitdren, five daughters and two sons, ranging in age from 27 to 5. And he lives with, he says, parodying the gossip columnists, a "CC-Constant Companion."

Because of his various obligations, as well as his wide-ranging interests, he still finds himself taking time out every now and again to make the bread and pay the taxes. He takes side trips in books, such as the one on Marilyn Monroe and the latest on Henry Miller, and in magazine articles, covering conventions, candidates, the Central Intelligence Agency and Water-

Celebrating a Publication

He was in New York the other day, celebrating the publication of "Genius and Lust: A Journey Through the Major Writings of Henry Miller," published by Grove Press. He considers Miller, at his best, the greatest living American writer, worthy of comparison to Hemingway and Faulkner.

He also is an admirer of Saul Bellow, who will receive the Nobel Prize in Literature in Stockholm this evening. "To my surprise, I felt good about Saul getting it," he said, "because he de-served it. I sent him a telegram of congratulations."

Mr. Mailer, of course, had been men tioned as a candidate for the Nobel, and his future chances will probably ride on the big novel.

"Twe had a few false alarms about the Nobel," he said. "After 'Armies of the Night' in 1969, an Associated Press reporter called me early in the morning of the day of the announcements be cause he had picked up a rumor that I would get it. I learned later that he had mixed me up with another M—

He says that he could have used the prize when he wrote "The Deer Park," his novel with a Hollywood background, because everybody jumped on him then. In those days there was his frequent talk about defending his writing title—the boxing analogy. "But I'm no longer talking about defending it. Well . . . maybe against Tolstoy. I was more on the order of Ezzard Charles. than Joe Louis, anyway."

He still thinks that the boxing metaphor is useful because there is a resemblance between a fighter and a writer. Both, he believes, are engaged in cool and controversial acts, both make their own moves, and any good fighter and writer become aware that the main bout is with themselves. "Knowing that," Mailer says, "you become a wiser man."

Method Is Offered to Avoid Wrong Seating at One Table

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

The World Team Olympiad in Monte Carlo last May highlighted a problem that has plagued serious players for more than half a century.

If players are wrongly seated at one table in a head-to-head match, which happens now and then despite the best endeavors of team captains and officials, the play of the session, perhaps alsting two hours or more, becomes totally meaningless. In Monte Carlo, the match between Brazil and Italy, the eventual winners and runners-up, was ruthed in this fashion and was never replayed.

A simple method of guarding against this disaster has been suggested by this writer, and will be introduced in Grand National play here tomorrow, perhaps precluding its adoption at the national and international level.

At the start of each session, players will be required to write their names, together with a team name or number, on a slip of paper to be inserted with their cards on the first deal. If the next player to handle the same cards finds the name of a teammate, or the name someone unconnected with his match, he can summon the tournament director and have matters put right.

Subsequent analysis of the abortive Brazil-Italy encounter in Monte Carlo showed that the South American champions had much the best of matters, judging by a comparison with the results obtained on the same cards in other matches.

One of the deals from "The Match That Never Was," as it was later described by The Bridge World magazine, is shown in the diagram. With values for game and two balanced hands, it is normal for North-South to reach three no-trump, which is easily defeated by a spade lead. This happened at almost every table, and most declarer's went down two tricks by playing for East to hold both queen and jack of diamonds. One of the Brazilian pairs escaped the trap, ironically by utilizing some Precision bidding machinery devised by one of their Italian opponents, Benito Garozzo. The South player, Gabriel Chagas, opened one no-trump, showing 13-15 high-card points and a balanced hand. Two clubs by his partner, Pedro Assumpcao, was Stayman, inquiring about major suits, and the rebid of three of three clubs was a specialized bid making for a further distributional description

Three hearts then pinpointed South's distribution as 2-3-4-4, and North had good reason to mistrust a no-trump contract: the opponents were almost certain to lead spades and score tricks in that suit sooner or later. Rather than try for an 11-trick contract in clubs, which would have failed, Assumpcao made an intelligent decision by bidding four hearts, arriving in a four-three fit.

With the actual distribution, four hearts proved easy to make. West led the space ace and continued the suit, which was the best defense. Chagas won the second trick and played trumps, driving out the ace. East was forced to win the second round, and a trump remained in the dummy to dis-courage another spade lead.

If East had been able to hold up his heart ace for another round, the declarer would have had a delicate deci-

In any event, the prospects of four hearts were greatly superior to three no-trump, and North-South deserved to gain points. But as it turned out, all they had done was to outbid their nmates, who held the same cards in THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW SAYS:

Lena is writing a letter to her sister Flo, whose dog has just died. "I'm so sorry about your dog, your little dog," she writes, and then suddenly erupts into laughter and crumples the letter into the wastebasket. When Cis, one of Clem's models in the old days, comes to revive her acquaintance with him. Lena intercepts her halfway up the stairs and argues her out of her intention. They disturb a couple trying to sleep, and the husband opens the door to complain. Defending herself and Clem against this single infraction, Lena asks: "Do we talk? Do we make gestures? Do we throw up our arms, do we shout?"

When the air-raid warning come Clem and Lena struggle down the end-less stairs with his latest canvas, which is to be his masterpiece. He even works on it in the cellar, among the garbage cans, while Robinson's radio rattles on. and Mrs. Fraser, remembering a long-gone time when they lived in one of the colonies, remarks, "my husband is an authority on jungle music."

At the height of one of the worst raids, Clem runs out into the street crying: "I must see it! I must see this!" With the entire city rocking under the bombs, he rushes through the streets, climbs the fire escape of a tall building and looks down at "all that light, a sea of it, from what reservoir had this flooded up, this drenching light, blazing red, and to his left a falling green, retargets of light cataracts of light, red and yellow and green." This is what he cannot capture on his canvas, though he would give his life for it.

When Clem dies, not in the raid but in such a way that Mr. Hanley teases us with deliberate ambiguity, Lena con-templates what is left of her life and reflects that "he left the question behind him." She had known for some time that he would never be able to answer it, but even when she ceased to believe in him she stayed, because "than that" "there's more to a man than that."
"Was I too loyal?" she asks herself, and wonders what she might have done differently or better. Her thoughts fade into the silence of a room where "a sudden clapping of hands would have sounded like thunder."

Since Henry Green no longer writes novels, there is no English novelist working today to compare to Mr. Hanley. His books, to borrow Lena's phrase, are hand claps that sound like the women who will grieve for lost sons, husbands and lovers. To his credit, Mr. Petrakis does not glorify the struggle of the Greeks for freedom from Turkish dominance; instead, through the character of Kanthos, a scribe who is writing the history of the war, he points up the awful cruelties that both sides visit upon one another. It is very earnest and decent, colored by lyrically described landscapes, keening women, brutish soldiers, bloody battles. Yet for all Mr. Petrakis's skill and sincere meditation upon the tragedies of war, the book is too studied. The characters, despite their primitive passions, sorrow and suffering, and the plangent simplic-ities of their words, seem figures in a historical pageant—solemn and stately and stiff. The book is more a lesson in history than a reliving of it. If the historical novelist can't bring his people to life, then he relinquishes to the historian the main claim he has on our extention.

N 1955, NBC presented the stage musical of "Peter Pan" starring Mary Martin to 65 million viewers, the largest television audience recorded until that time. This Sunday at 7:30 P.M., the network has a completely new musical adaptation of the James M. Barrie play, this one featuring Mia Farrow as Peter, the boy who flies from adventure to adventure, refusing to grow up. With comparisons obviously unavoidable, the new production loses points in certain areas and gains some in others.

As the first stage hit to be moved intact from Broadway to TV, the Mary Martin version was indeed an event starring one of the most dynamic women in the musical theater. The "magic"-of television is now commonplace, and Miss Farrow is decidedly not dynamic. In fact, she is rather delicate and fragile. Her Peter is not dreadful, he's simply not very impressive. In addition, while the score for the first production was more serviceable than inspired, the Anthony New-ley-Leslie Bricusse songs for this new one are even less inspired and have an unfortunate tendancy to gurgle into

These are serious flaws, to be sure, but the rest of this new "Peter Pan" is done to a generally splendid turn. The adaptation sticks closer to Barrie's original play. The sets and costumes are lavish and attractive. (The Kensington Gardens opening offers a first-rate demonstration in the use of on-location photography.) The narration is read by John Gielgud and, despite the sticky score, manages to capture Captain Hook as something more than a bumbling clown ("Ever a dark and solitary enigma, he was haunted by a sense of his own doom"). And the opening song, "Once Upon A Bedtime," is sung by Julie Andrews.

The entire production was under the supervision of Gary Smith, producer and Dwight Hemion, director, the same team responsible for last night's salute to Richard Rodgers and for countless award winning television musical shows. Maintaining their typical standards of taste and imagination, they have transformed this "Peter Pan" into a visual delight. Tinkerbell and Peter's shadow are captured with clever animation techniques. The flying scenes are remarkably believable, and the inevitable chestnuts, such as asking the audience if they believe in fairies, are handled with admirable restraint.

The rest of the cast is quite good. Danny Kave is kept to an unusually low performing pitch, and Captain Hook is one of his best creations in years. His songs are among the most successful in the score and, with Tony Sympson as his daffy foil Smee,! he delivers them superbly. Briony Mc-Roberts is an exceptionally appealing Wendy, and Virginia McKenna is lovely as her mother. The musical sequences were staged by Michael Kidd.

In the end, the story of "Peter Pan" continues to weave its strange, almost disturbing spell. As the narrator asks, "In the mind of a child, who can tell where reality ends and fantasy begins?" And so it will go on, as long as children are gay and innocent and artless. A stereo version of the soundtrack will be simulcast on radio in many cities. In the New York metropolitan area, the presentation will be carried on WVNJ-FM in Newark.

Also in the area of children's programming, at 7 P.M. Sunday on NBC, gramming, at 7 P.M. Sunday on NBC, immediately preceding "Peter Pan," there is a repeat of "The Tiny Tree." That half-hour of animation was created, directed and produced for the Bell System by Chuck Couch. The Johnny Marks songs are sung by Robert Fleck The story of the tiny tree. berta Flack. The story of the tiny tree, its animal friends and a new girl in the vicinity is narrated by Buddy Ebsen. It is among the better and less frantic Christmas specials.

Italians, is on camera frequently, but the extent of his contribution to this documentary is unclear as Paul W. Greenberg, the producer and director, also takes credit as writer. Is Mr. Barzini merely reading Mr. Greenberg's script? The ways of TV credits are hopelessly confusing.

But "Evicande Pomana Communicies"

But "Friends, Romans, Communists" offer a helpful delineation of the "powerful force" of Communism in Italy and of the "political schism" that is tearing the country in two. The Communists are shown to be proficient in preparation, training and hard work traits that are "unique in Italian politics." About 60 percent of Italy's Communists come from the middle class. It is "hardly a part of starving masses." The Christian Democrats are seen as representing "the small, bor-ing voice of reason." The Church has been reduced to being the provided of "ersatz medieval pageantry." And the military "has survived by not distinguishing itself for passion or reckessness.

These are unusually bitter observations for a television documentary. And the conclusion is pessimistic: "Unless democracy succeeds, and swiftly, totalitarianism is inevitable." Ironically, this is also an unusually attractive documentary pictorially. The photographer was Mario Biasetti. Also of interest:

A Free, and Easy, Place For Music

Bý OLIVE EVANS

"I am exactly as I am/and not the way you'd like for me to be," sang the Fiction Brothers bluegrass quinter at the Free Music Store on a recent

Saturday evening.

And the Free Music Store is exactly as it is. Most Saturday nights about 400 people can be found sitting on the floor and listening to live music, packing the nave of what once was the Swedish Evangelical Church at 359
East 62d Street. It is now Studio C of WBAI-FM, the nonprofit, listenersupported radio station.

On a recent Saturday evening there was a line down to First Avenue by 8 P.M., an hour before a bluegrass group called the Diamonds in the Rough were to go on stage—and on the air. The earliest arrivals sat on the entrance steps, reading, doing crossword puzzies, drinking coffee and chatting, while a man walked up and down the line collecting signatures on an anti-arms

When the doors opened, many but not all of the patrons slipped a dollar bill or two into the huge bottle on a wooden desk inside the entrance. Then the first arrivals made a dash for the pews in the back of the hall.

The rest sat on cushions brought from home, or on one of the black foam rubber pads piled at the door. Having staked out a spot, the next thing many people did was remove their shoes. 'Are you sitting on a cable?" Ira Weitzman, the producer of the show, asked someone. "Cables aren't for sitting." But it was not easy to avoid cable anywhere on the periphery of the shabby green rug that served as a stage. A pair of sneakers here or hiking boots there seemed to mark off where the stage ended and the audience began.

"Our goal is to perform, in an informal setting, music by young people who are getting their start, people who don't have a commercial focus," Mr. Weitzman explained "In addition, people who are already successful can experiment with different kinds of performing, since there isn't that pressure to sell. For instance, Peter Schickele will do things here that he just can't do at his regular P.D.Q. Bach concerts."

Indeed, although newcomers are wel-come, such well-known performers with as varied a background as Igor Kipnis, Keith Jarrett, Patti Smith and Don McLean have played the Free Music Store and the Cleveland Quartet did an evening of Beethoven string quarters not long ago.

While Mr. Weitzman spoke, the Diamonds in the Rough—guitar, mandolin, bass, banjo and fiddle—ambled out onto the stage, wearing different versions of unpressed country casual. "Our first song is about someone who has been working in the mill for a long time and what his state of mind is like." Joel Ponzan, the banjo player said once the "On the Air" sign flashed. The song was called "Gotta Go to Work on Monday, One More Time.

A young woman, sitting in the lotus position, sewed steadily during the melancholy number, sometimes nodding her head gently. Other heads joined hers during "Alcatraz Blues." A young man did his own dance, moving quietly in a corner. There was an occasional

"We're really on the singles strip here." Mr. Weitzman said. "And we get a lot of people who are sort of sucked in and don't really know about us. But, of course, we have many

"A Woman Is...With Bess Myerson" takes you on a fascinating tour through the state of American womanhood in a way that felevision has never done before. "We're going to be looking into the whole question of what it means to be a woman today in America, says hostess Bess Myerson.

In tonight's documentary you'll meet two teenagers from New Jersey who speak not only for themselves but for a generation of women adolescents searching for an identity at a time when the role of American women is undergoing a profound change.

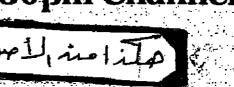

And all next week-Monday to Friday at 9:30a.m.-you'll meet other young women to further examine the provocative questions raised in tonight's program.

Solo Flight For Arroyo On Sunday

By RAYMOND ERICSON

When Martina Arroyo gives her recital at Avery Fisher Hali on Sunday at 3 P.M., she will be on her own, with the exception, of course, of her pianist, Donald Hassard. It will be a novelty of sorts for the soprano, who is a leading singer at the Metropolitan Opera but who has not given a solo recital here for a number of years.

In fact it was back in the 1960-61 season, before the luscious-voiced singer was famous, that she gave her only recital in Manhattan, at Town Hall. She has given them in Brooklyn, Queens and other places in this country and Europe, but her two previously scheduled solo appearances here had to be cancelled because of illness.

There will be no operatic arias on her program on Sunday. She is a firm believer in separating opera and lieder, unless the singer chooses to revive arias that are not likely to be heard in a full operatic performance. Miss Arroyo grew up hearing great lieder singers in all-Schubert or all-Wolf song programs not realizing that they were often fine opera artists as well.

Accordingly she will sing songs by Brahms, Richard Strauss, Rossini, Granados and Turina. There will be a group of old Italian works, some of which are really arias but have achieved the status of recital songs, and a group of spirituals. When Miss Arroyo sings in Europe, she is always asked to include the latter, since they are considered an important element of American

Her chance to sing a recital here came two years ago when she was invited to appear in Lincoln Center's Great Performer Series. But then she became ill. Sunday's event will be a postponed engagement in the series, so to speak. Although Miss Arroyo is having trouble with her back, a recurrent ailment, she swears that she will sing the recital, "even if I have to be seated."

A recital is a relief for an opera singer because of all the performing arts, opera involves the greatest blend of different arts and involves the cooperation and interaction of a host of artists and technicians. And therein lies the problem for any conscientious

The elaborate machinery and human effort that is needed to put on an opera has become too costly for the right number of rehearsals. Without them it leaves the singer insecure. "It's not only unfair to us," Miss Arroyo said the other day in her Upper East Side apartment, "it's unfair to the stage director. If the singers don't know what he wants them to convey to the audience, then he is often criticized for ideas he didn't have.

"There are, naturally, singers who say. That's the way we always did it in Parma. Why bother to change it?" But they are few nowadays. When John Dexter [the Met's director of production] was restaging 'Gioconda,' he took everything apart and made us work it out as if it were a new opera. If the characters didn't develop naturally in the action, he discarded it completely and started over again. It came out clean and logical. But this is possible only when you have plenty of rehearsal time."

Strangers When They Meet

Miss Arroyo also has experienced those extreme cases encountered by other singers, in which they never meet artists they are appearing with until the curtain goes up. She once did a "Trovatore" in Zurich, in which the tenor arrived at the last minute. "During the first-act ensemble, he said, sotto voce, 'Piacere'—'Glad to meet you'—and when I got a chance in the music I whispered Piacere' back. I don't think he ever did get to meet the conductor."

For the Harlem-born soprano, lack of rehearsal has made her steer clear of roles she would like to sing, and her admirers would like to hear her do. A case in point is the name part in "Norma."

"I have never sung Norma in an opera house," she said, "but I know I can do it. But it's a role that needs so much work with the others in the cast and, even more, the creation of characters and drama in an opera that is no more than an oratorio if that doesn't happen. Without that kind of preparation, it's no go."

preparation, it's no go."

Miss Arroyo, who good-naturedly calls herself "Madame Butterball" hecause of her less than lissome shape, also believes that without considerable backstage help an artist can be in even more trouble, "Once," she recalled, "I was singing 'Aida' in Verona. They gave me a halter and another piece of apparel worthy of a belly dancer. Even if I'd heen Twiggy, I would have looked ridiculous, and the audience would have hooted when I went onstage. I protested, even though I was young and they thought I was putting on airs. At least they gave me a coat

Miss Arroyo was asked if she felt any different, now that she is an established star, from the years when she was struggling to advance her career. "No," she said. "I enjoyed tremendously getting up in the musical world. But after you're established, you don't just say to yourself, 'Oh, now you've arrived.' I don't see how you can ever be different. When you walk in front of 3,000 people, practically taking your life in your hands; you give everything you've got. I don't know anyone who feels otherwise.

"I'm doing a new production of Macbeth' at Covent Garden in London and I look forward to that as much as anything I've ever done. And this is the way I feel about any project or plea I have. I'm doing my first Senta in 'The Flying Dutchman' in Philadelphia this season, which is exciting to me. I'll do my first 'Andrea Chenier' at the Met. I even look forward to singing in concert the Immolation Scene from Wagner's Götterdämmerung," and that's a year and a half away, in Cleve-

Rodrique Tremblay, the 37-year-old Minister of Industry and Trade, said in an interview that the government's first aim was reduction of the unemployment rate through the creation of industrial jobs based to a large extent

Mr. Tremblay, who came to the cabinet from the University of Montreal where he headed the economics department, denied widespread charges that the Parti Québécois, which won a surprising electoral victory Nov. 15, was a radical group out to socialize Quebec while making it independent from Canada.

The new government is having to fight against the distrust and hostility of the Canadian and foreign business world not only because of its commitment to independence but also because of a party program that places strong emphasis on local control of, and wider public participation in an economy largely dominated by out-side private interests.

"We are only mildly socialist—at any rate considerably less socialist than the Labor Government in Brit-ain," Mr. Tremblay said. "We are not in favor of large-scale nationalization

CABINET IN BRITAIN IN ACCORD ON CUTS TO GET I.M.F. LOAN

The New York Times

Austerity Reductions Reportedly Will Be Spread Over Two Years ---Could Total $5.8 Billion

> By ROBERT B. SEMPLE Jr. Special to The New York Time

LONDON, Dec. 9-The British Cabinet ended more than two weeks of meetings today in apparent agreement over the austerity measures that this country is to take to satisfy the International Monetary Fund. Britain has asked the fund for a loan of $3.9 billion, partly to make up for its deficit in the balance of pay-

The sources suggested, however, that only the first-year figure was a firm one. The second-year figure might well be adjusted, they said, if Britain's position as a trading nation improved.

.The cuts would not be accomplished exclusively by reductions in public spending. There may well be tax increases, and the sources did not rule out sales of certain assets, such as the Government's tain assets, such as the Robert of the Register of th share, or part of its share, in the British

Petroleum Corporation. Denis Healey, the Chancellor of the Ex-chequer, will reveal final details of the package in the House of Commons next Wednesday.

News on Support Awaited

At the same time, sources said, he hopes to have some encouraging news about Britain's effort to get West German and American support for a longer term effort to support the so-called sterling balances, the billions of pounds held as a reserve currency by other nations, chiefly the Arabs and other oil exporters. Much of the recent decline of the pound, which has increased the costs of imports into Britain and damaged the prospects for economic revival, is traced by some experts here to nervous selling holders of these balances. Britain would like somehow to remove this ele-ment of uncertainty governing the value

But the precise form of such an agree-ment on the sterling balances was not clear today, and even the British seem undecided on how the task should be accomplished or what it will cost to "guar-antee" sterling holders a floor price for their counds so that they will not be tempted into speculative selling.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister James Cal-laghan told the Common that an earlier loan had been repaid. Earlier this year, the Group of 10, a consortium of major industrial nations, had given this country an line outcred billion had been used. Mr. Callaghan saidthat sum had been repaid "exactly on

Management

From Corporate World to Government

For executives accustomed to running a corporation or financial institution, the prospect of government service can be somewhat unsettling. After all, government at all levels moves slowly, and the pressures are multifaceted.

Roy L. Ash, who has known both worlds, first as president of Litton Industries and then as director of the Office of Management and Budget under President Richard M. Nixon and President Ford, is in a position to compare the two, and his experience might be useful to prospective members of the new Carter administration.

Taking time out from his new career, as board chairman of the Addressograph-Multigraph Corporation, the 58-Administration. "what it feels like" to enter the Government at a high managerial level. "Just imagine yourself as chief executive officer." he said, "when your board of directors is made up of your employees, customers, suppliers and competitions. How would you like to run that business and try to be effective?"

The executive in government, Mr. Ash maintained, has to operate "as if his board of directors—Congress and the public—represents that diverse a group of interests."

Chief executives get things done autocratically, he said. They "impose decisions on an organization—and that's it." On the other hand, in government, decisions come by "persuasion, negodecisions come by "persuasion, nego-tiation and compromise, by reaching agreement with others who have their own power base."
He cited the nation's energy crisis as an example. Both government and business recognized the situation as one of "great concern." Businessmen analyzed the impact upon their companies of shortages and higher prices, then made decisions to deal with the problem. "They put the word out and everybody complied." he said complied," he said. But in government, he added, despite a wealth of analysis, the President had no authority to enunciate energy policy. The problem required negotiation with the Congress, persuading the public—and compromise." The consequences of such a system are clear, he suggested, noting that Congress and the executive branch had been arguing for three years about energy conservation without taking any substantial action.

Likening the mechanism to a giant aircraft carrier, he said that "even if you give a signal for a hard turn, it's a mile before you can see a change, and 10 miles before you make the turn. "The fact that you can't turn the Government fast," he added, "is not necessarily bad. If each new person the beneficiaries because the future is predictable within a range of normality on what steering signals are given." Mr. Ash feels strongly that businessmen coming into government "realize that they'll not change the world overnight and it's probably very good that they can't." He contended that "if they were able to change course rapidly, it would probably be bad. The people are

By RONA CHERRY

Officials of Joseph E. Seagram & Sons Inc., the nation's largest distiller, are scheduled to appear today before a Government agency that has ordered a nine-day suspension of the company's Federal operating license. The suspension has not vet gone into effect.

Seagram and two of its operating divi-sions have been accused of offering ille-gal trips to liquor wholesalers as inducements to buy Seagram products.

Following unpublicized hearings held several months ago, an administrative law judge for the Federal Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms set the nine-day suspension of Seagram's license. The company is appealing the action, how-ever, at today's hearing in Washington.

The action against Seagram comes in investigation of bribes and kickbacks in the liquor industry.

The New York State Liquor Authority, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the alcohol bureau have been investigating the use of cash payments, and other kickbacks to increase their sales. If Seagram loses the initial appeal, it

'Oddball' Properties End Up at F.D.I.C.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (UPI) - The Government agency responsible for insuring 14,000 of the nation's banks has acquired a financial interest in some unusual assets lately: fleets of tuna boats and taxis, an X-rated movie, a "bawdy house" and a high-priced copy of the Koran. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation also has purchased 47 wind machines at a cost of $427,000 to protect its citrus crops from freezing.

The reason for such ventures was explained today by Robert E. Barnett, chair-man of the F.D.I.C., in a speech in San Juan, Puerto Rico. The text was released in Washington.

When a bank fails, Mr. Barnett said, the F.D.I.C. must either pay off the insured depositors or arrange for another bank to assume the liabilities and purchase some of the assets. Before 1973 the F.D.I.C.'s asset inventory was relatively small, he said. Since then, however, eight large banks have failed, in-cluding the U.S. National Bank of San Diego and New York's Franklin National Bank. Now the F.D.I.C. administers an inventory of 78,000 assets with an aggregate book value of $2.6 billion. Under the law, Mr. Barnett explained, for meetings with community leaders. VW's plans are far more ambitious than were Volvo's. It is investing $300 million in the assembly plant and also has the go-ahead for a stamping plant as well. VW says its American plant will have a 200,000 annual peak capacity and will employ 2,500 to start and 5,000 at peak capacity.

Decline From First to Third

VW fell from first to third among car mporters last year partly because German currency changes sent its prices soaring. It is building its American plant the midst of an ongoing Federal and state to try to recapture its lost sales position. The two Japanese auto giants that overtook VW, leading Toyota and No. 2 Nissan, which makes the Datsun cars, also had been studying the possibility of an American plant. Does U.S. Back City's Housing Bonds?

There was almost no trading in $250 million worth of New York City Housing Authority bonds yesterday while dealers attempted to determine which bonds are in effect, guaranteed by the Federal Government

The dealers are also anxious to see the legal opinion Stoever Glass & Company, a municipal bond dealer, has secured from Mudge, Rose, Guthrie & Alexander supporting the dealer's re-search findings that more than $60 million of the bonds have had Federal backing, some since 1973 and some since 1968.

It is an important question because the bonds have been trading at prices to yield 10 to 13 percent on a texexempt basis. Most local housing authority bonds trade at prices yielding between 3 and 6½ percent tax-free. Before the discovery of a Federal subsidy, the Stoever organization had been weighing the significance of the fact that, in addition to the city's fall faith and credit guarantee, the housing bonds also had rental and mortgage backing.

Since the housing bond yields were similar to those of other depressed New York City general obligation bonds, the Stoever firm thought the housing bonds might be a better specu-

It was in investigating the operating results of the Housing Authority that

By ROBERT METZ

Steven J. Hueglin, a Stoever salesman, discovered that several of the projects appeared to have been incorporated under the same Federal subsidy program as other public housing authority bonds, which many consider to be guaranteed by the Federal Govern-ment, though technically they are not.

The evidence is strong enough, however, that those public housing authority bonds with the Federal subsidy carry an AAA rating compared with a normal Caa rating for New York City bonds of all descriptions.

"The [United States] Government is unconditionally obligated to pay to the [New York City Housing] Authority annual contributions in amounts which will be sufficient to pay the principal of and interest on the outstanding bonds when due," the Mudge, Rose opinion said in part. "The faith of the United States Government is solemnly pledged to the payment of such annual contributions."

Frederick J. Stoever, who is president of the municipal bond firm, said that since its founding in 1964 it has dealt primarily with individual investors but has never specialized in New York City

Mr. Stoever stressed that his firm did not own any of the bonds, had refrained from retail trading in them since uncovering the findings and would not resume retail trading in them until a new market level was es-

Expert judgment in municipal bonds...

Stoever Glass & Co. has dramatic news:

Interest and principal on certain New York City "Guaranteed Housing" Bonds is subsidized by the United States Government.

In a recent review we made of the New York City Housing Authority's operating results, we discovered that certain of the housing projects of the Authority had been converted to federal projects and, that the contracts covering this arrangement contained provisions for federal debt service subsidies which appeared strikingly similar to provisions found in Public Housing Authority

In short, it appeared to us that some "Caa"-rated New York City Housing Authority bonds, thought to be secured only by rent revenues and a New York City guarantee, actually had backing very similar to that of the "Aaa"-rated P.H.A. bonds. These subsidy agreements covered some, not all, New York City Guaranteed Housing Bonds.

To substantiate our opinion we commissioned one of the nation's leading bond attorneys to draft a legal opinion covering the bonds issued for these specific housing projects. That opinion, confirming our research findings, states, in part, that these bonds:

"...are additionally secured by a first pledge of the specific portion of the Annual Contributions payable to the Authority, and authorized to be pledged to the payment of the outstanding bonds and the interest thereon pursuant to the Annual Contributions Contract for which the Government is unconditionally obligated to pay to the Authority Annual Contributions in amounts which will be sufficient to pay the principal of and interest on the outstanding bonds when due ... pursuant to the provisions of the United States Housing Act of 1937 the faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of such

At present, the full extent to which this new information will affect future markets for these bonds is not precisely known. But, it is our view that with the publication of counsel's opinion, the market value of the outstanding bonds issued to finance these specific projects within the N.Y.C. Hsg. Auth. will eventually appreciate considerably. And when new market levels have been established for these bonds we will be happy to make prompt, competitive bids for them.

We do not own any of the bonds mentioned herein and this announcement is neither an offer to sell nor a solicitation of an offer to buy these bonds. Meanwhile, we suggest that you send us a list of the New York City Housing Authority bonds you own, listing the par amount, coupon rate, and month day and year of maturity. Be sure to include the name of the specific housing project which appears on the face of each bond so that we can tell you which of them is covered in the legal opinion.

Money Supply Rises in Week, Wiping Out Decline

Reserve Report

DAILY AVERAGES

By PAUL LEWIS

The Federal Reserve increased the nation's money supply in the week ended Dec. I, wiping out the surprising decline that had occurred in the previous week. But the figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York yesterday also showed that Dr. Arthur F. Burns, the Fed's chairman, was still managing the narrowly defined money supply known as M-1, in a more conservative fashion than the broader measure, called M-2.

In the view of some money market analysts, this ambiguous approach to monetary policy raises the possibility of a con-flict developing early next year between Dr. Burns and a Congress that may feel he is not providing adequate monetary support for the flagging economy.

Political Pressure Expected "Politically, the Fed Is going to be under pressure to get M-1 moving faster early next year to head off a quarrel with Congress," said Alan C. Lerner, a vice presient and money market economist with the Bankers Trust Company.

Yesterday's figures showed that M-1 which measures money in circulation and checking accounts, climbed $2.7 billion in the week ended Dec. I to $310.3 billion. This wiped out the previous week's de-

Between 6 and 23 Basis Points

But the Federal Reserve Board is not vithout arguments on its-side. Yesterday, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported that interest rates generally continued to decline in the week ended Dec. 8, with falls of between 6 and 23 basis growth rate is still only 4.8 percent, or points. A basis point is a hundredth of percentage point While these declines partly reflect weak demand for credit resulting from the business slowdown, low rates are also more conducive to recovery than high ones.

Moreover, last week's drop of 7 basis points in the commercial paper rate means that Citibank could cut its prime lending rate today under the formula it usually follows. This might spark a gener alized reduction in the prime rate to  $6\frac{1}{4}$

The reserve also can argue that most attention should be paid to the performance of M-2, which has been expanding guide to the expansion of the gross national product than that of M-I.

Dr. Burns's cautious handling of M-1 is broadly supported by the so-called "shadow open market committee"—a group of monetarist economists who nonitor the Fed's handling of the money supply—and by a study recently released by the House Banking Committee's subcommittee on domestic monetary policy.

This study, commissioned by the subcommittee's chairman, Representative Stephen L. Neal, Democrat of North Carolina, endorses a 4 percent to 6 percent target range for M-1 at the moment com-bined with a $15 billion to $20 billion tax cut to provide fresh economic stimu-

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9-Venezuela has given details of an accord with the Soviet Union to exchange petroleum markets for a volume of 20,000 barrels a day, thereby effecting a considerable saving on transportation costs, according to Venezuelan

The agreement was concluded Nov. 26 during the visit to Moscow of President Carlos Andres Perez and described by him last Thursday in a radio-television statement in Caracas.

He said that under the new arrangement Venezuela would begin shipping 20,000 barrels of crude oil a day to Cuba, which has been receiving its petroleum supplies almost exclusively from the Soviet Union for the last 15 years.

In turn, the Soviet Union is to take over the supply of some of Venezulea's West European markets, President Perez said, adding that under the arrangement, Venezuela will increase its profits by at least $1.20 a barrel."

Apparently, the agreement will only partially alleviate the Soviet Union's problem of keeping Cuba supplied with oil. According to a Central Intelligence Agency economic study published last March, Cuba received 155,000 barrels of oil a day from the Soviet Union in 1974. The figure is probably higher now.

Mr. Perez described the arrangement as "an agreement or reciprocal concession of oil quotas," which was "a procedure often used in the international oil the Union Carbide offering cost and said new legislation might be needed to facilitate such construction. It also advocated that Alaska oil be released from Federal pricing controls to allow it to compete freely with foreign crude oil.

Meanwhile, on the East Coast, Atlantic Richfield has been defending in Federal Court its effort to complete a merger valued at $760 million with the Anaconda Company, one of the nation's leading producers of copper, aluminum and uranium. To answer one objection to the merger from the Federal Trade Commission, Atlantic Richfield this week completed sale of its 50 percent stake in a uranium-producing company in south Texas for $50 million.

The Alaska oil project and the amalgamation with Anaconda would be two crown jewels in Atlantic Richfield's 10year transformation. Both would provide it with a stronger base for long-range domestic growth, especially in the natural resources field. But many other things have been happening at the company since the early years of the 1960's, when its annual sales were only about $1 billion.

It all began when the Atlantic Refining Company in the East merged with Richfield Oil on the West Coast. Then the new entity beame a truly national business enterprise when it took over the Sinelar Oil Corporation, giving it a big chemical base, a good pipeline and the domestic crude production it shortage.

After digesting those mergers, Atlantic Richfield's top executives then conceived several strategic goals for the enlarged complex. It wanted a balance transportation, refining and marketing capabilities. That meant disposing of half of its 25,000 gasoline service stations. It wanted to move heavily into chemicals, sever foreign operations, obtain alternative energy sources and construct a broader base in the mineral extraction industry.

It has been greatly interested in diversification and has been acquiring large coal properties soon to come into operation in the West.

Criticizing some suggestions in Washington and elsewhere that the oil companies be stopped in their entry into alternative forms of energy. Mr. Davis said:

"If the nation won't allow the oil companies to get into alternative forms of energy, it would force them to take their cash flow and put it into other lines of business. That wouldn't further the United States energy objectives. Coal, for instance, will require very large sums of money for its development. It's an ideal way for the oil companies to use their financial resources as oil and gas opportunities in the Unit-ed States diminish in the next 20 years. Besides, we have the people and the expertise to develop alternative energy

One acquisition that surprised the business world was outside the goals enunciated by Atlantic Richfield some years ago. It was the company's agreement to acquire last month 90 percent of the shares of the group that pub-lishes The London Observer newspaper and magazine in what it termed a 'moderate investment."

Explaining that move Atlantic Richfield executives say it will give the company a "window on the world in an era of great change.

Mr. Davis commented: "We have to stay abreast, or ahead of, that change in technology, in the intellectual area, in the world's economy and in the po-litical world. We need a dialogue with the press, who are reporting on such change around the world. It doesn't indicate we want to go into the publish-

Rolls-Royce Ltd, announced in London that a consortium it heads has won an order valued at the equivalent of $165 million for 42 gas turbine pumping stations to be installed on a pipeline that will cary natural gas from newly developed fields in western Si-beria. A Rolls-Royce official said that his company would handle about 75 percent of the work in supplying the Avon jet engines that will power the stations along the 80-mile line connecting the Siberian area with Chelyabinsk, a rall junction and industrial center in

Besides Rolls-Royce, the consortium, known as Coberrow Ltd., includes the British units of two American com-panies, Copper Industries Inc. of Houston, and the Williams Companies of Tulsa, Okla. The order was placed by the Soviet Gas Ministry.

Standard Oil of Indiana Predicts Cut in 1976 Net

CHICAGO, Dec. 9 (Renters) — The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) said today that revisions in its estimated 1975 year-end United States and Canadian reserves of petroleum liquids and natural gas would reduce its 1976 earnings by about $26 million.

The reduction reflects increased depreciation, depletion and amortization charges to be recorded in the fourth quarter. It said this was a one-time charge relating to properties and lease facilities that are being abandoned.

The review of its proved reserves was made to conform to reserve definitions generally accepted in the industry and to comply with new Securities and Exchange Commission guidelines. In the third quarter, the company reported net earnings of $253.1 million, equal to $1.73 a share, up 10 percent from $229.7 million, or $1.57 a share, for the similar three months

No 'Resting on Our Laurels'

Pressures in the semiconductor branch of electronics were intense, however. Dr. Noyce said, "because, in our business, no product has ever lasted more than five years, there's no chance of resting on our laureis."

The founding of Intel in 1968, Dr. Noyce said, was spurred in part by mistakes in innovation management at Fairchild for which he blamed himself. One of the mistakes, he added, was allowing too many people the opportunity to say "no" to an innovation. He called this, "group-

A second mistake was in compensating managers of product lines according to the profitability of that line. This, Dr. Noyce said, meant that managers were unwilling to take on a new product that might reduce profitability for six months

The third mistake, he noted, was in allowing work groups to get too large.
"Big is bad." he said. The spirit of the small group is better and the work is much harder."

Despite a decline in optimism in the United States and "enormous dangers of counterproductive action by the Government," such as the wrong kind of regula-tions, Dr. Noyce said, "I see the confi-dence returning. The United States is ab-solutely the best place in the world to promote innovation. Our society is better organized to take care of it. Our spirit ber reached 9.69 billion pounds, a gain

Korean Bank Signs Loan Accord With 32 International Banks

meeting today to discuss Korea's request for Japanese financial cooperation in its SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 9 (UPI)-The state run Korea Exchange Bank, representing six other local banks, signed a $100 million loan agreement today with a group of 32 international banks including Citi-bank and the Chase Manhattan Bank of the United States.

The agreement described by financial experts as "one of the most successful loan syndications in Korea's history," was signed by representatives of the Korean banks and newly established Korea Associated Finance Ltd. of Hong Kong, which acted as an agent for the Korean

programs.

The loan will be paid back in five years, with a two-year grace period, at an annual interest rate based on the Eurodollar rate plus 1.78 percent, they said.

Auction Pullout Set By Cadillac Fairview

Special to The New York Times LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9-The Cadillac Fairview Corporation of Toronto, one of the two major suitors for the Irvine Company, announced today that it would withdraw from an "auction" battle for the company, but said it was willing to submit a new higher sealed.

Apparently troubled by its continuing escalation of bidding for the land development company with the Mobil Corporation, the Canadian concern said that it would "submit no further bids on all of the shares of the company in the present auction proced-ures." But, it said it had advised shareholders of the California concern that it was "prepared to submit a higher offer than any of the present offers for all of the shares, providing that the bidding proceeds on a sealed-bid basis. Cadillac Fairview had bid $286.2 million in cash and notes for the Irvine Company Mobil has offered $281.9 million in cash.

Deposit inflow by Savings Banks In November Largest in 8 Months

New York State savings banks recorded a $310 million net inflow of deposits in November, the largest inflow in eight months, the Savings Banks Association of New York State reported yesterday, The deposit inflow was $261 million in October and $287 million in November.

The association also reported that during November, 55,542 new checking ac-counts were opened. These brought the total for the newly permitted accounts in savings banks to 680,935 and a monthend balance in these accounts of $240 million. Of the 118 savings banks in New York State, 109 are now offering checking accounts, the association added.

The ads feature coupons offering growing instructions for 25-cents or "Avocados grow on you!" T-shirts for $3. They have elicited about 1,000 queries a day, according to Joseph F. Gallagher, president of the agency. The campaign is one in a four-pronged effort, the fourth prong, televi-sion, being added this year for the first time thanks to an exceptional crop. Another effort, which Mr. Gallagher said, helps the client extend its budget about 50 percent is a tie-in campaign with such manufacturers as General Foods (for Jell-O) and Kraft Dressings that runs in all of the major women's service magazines as well as Cosmopolitan and Sunset.

These ads, which show various uses of the fruit, do not run nationally as the Isadora campaign does. They run regionally in Western editions covering California avocado's best markets.

The other campaign, also restricted to the West, is exclusively on radio. Restaurants that agree to feature avocado dishes on their menus in re-

Television is being added to the mix in 10 markets, again all in the West. And the special message in them is, Here's one good food that costs less this year."

When Wasey got the account in 1968 the bikings were $500,000. The current budget is about $2.2 million. Budgets depend on crop sizes and they have grown from 70 million pounds to 120 million pounds in the 1950's to 300 million pounds (worth $65 million to the growers) this fiscal year.

And, said Robert P. Brownson, vice president and account supervisor. they're able to sell every avocado grown. He expects a goodly number to be available in New York.

Well it just so happens that New York and the East Coast is considered the prime market by the Florida avocado growers who belong to the Lime and Avocado Administrative Committee, which only now is seriously thinking about advertising promotion.

Its executive vice president, Charles Walker, projects his own members crop at from 75 million to 80 million pounds. His promotion budget, however, will only be between $150,000 and $175,000 with much of that going toward a pub-lic relations effort. Recently the committee retained Botsford Ketchum, San Francisco, an agency with wide experience with commodity accounts.

Mr. Gallagher, when asked to, describes Florida avocados as being more watery than his own favorite fruit, which he considers richer and contain-ing more oil. He thinks the day is ap-proaching when a comparative advertising campaign will have to be mounted to tell consumers the difference.

Mr. Walker, whose growers now dominate in markets once dominated by pre-Castro Cuba, believes his fruit has fewer calories than its California cousins. If a head-to-head showdown confrontation of fruits takes place he believes that it won't be on either coast but in the middle West. Watch for it.

3 Accounts to New Homes

After "an intensive search." Renault USA has decided to give its account to Marsteller. David R. T. Wood, its new vice president-marketing, said that 60 agencies were originally considered and the field narrowed to four finalists from which Marsteller was chosen.

The marketer of the imported French automobile says its budget for 1977 "is set at about $3 million." The company was spending that kind of money when the account was at McCaffrey & McCall, which resigned the business, reportedly because it was losing money on it.

Chalek & Dryer, the ad agency that helped to launch Tic Tac candy and then lost it last summer, has just picked up a replacement sweet—Pez Candy from Pez-Haas Inc., Orange, Conn. The ad budget is said to be more than $1 million with a lot of it going into spot television. Pace Advertising was the previous agency. On a somewhat more intellectual plain Waldenbooks, with almost 400

book stores across the literate land, is moving its account to Scali, McCabe, Sloves. The chain, owned by Carter Hawley Hale, was previously an ac-count at James Neal Harvey Inc.

Clearing House to D.D.B.

Doyle Dane Bernbach, the country's Ilth largest agency, has just been named to handle the account of the Publishers Clearing House with billings of "several millions of dollars."

Publishers Clearing House is the world's largest mail-order magazine subscription service and it talked to several agencies before selecting D.D.B. The account had been handled by March Advertising.

President Ford was urged yesterday by five incoming Democratic Senators not to approve a last-minute decontrol of gasoline prices. ### "Our Red Carpet Lease program is special."

Red Carpet Leasing is a 1977 Ford, Lincoln or Mercury. Ways which may prove financially beneficial to you. More and more business and professional people are choosing Red Carpet Leasing because it's the modern way to drive. And rightly so. Red Carpet Leasing provides many of the benefits of ownership while eliminating many of the disadvantages. Red Carpet Leasing can free cash because there's usually no large down payment and you can sell your present car for cash. It also can simplify tax records—especially important if you're able to deduct car expenses. For added convenience, a scheduled maintenance program can be arranged There's a lot more to Red Carpet Leasing but because you're a busy person we're making it easier for you to inquire about leasing. Simply visit your participating Ford or Lincoln-Mercury dealer. Or call and make arrangements for a personal consultation in your home or office.

Opera Quiz at Issue

Leonard Mayhew, assistant director of public information for WNET, noted that complete live perofrmances of operas had been televised previously. He cited as examples the New York City Opera's presentation from the New York State Theater at Lincoln Center of "The Barber of Seville" last Nov. 3 and "The Ballad of Baby Doe" last April 21.

He said opening nights in 1948, 1949 and 1956 were also telecast. Anthony A. Bliss, the executive director of the opera, said the Metropolitan had been trying to find a "television presence since 1950." He cited opera programs on the old "Omnibus" show and on closed-circuit cable television.

KENT GOLDEN LIGHTS MENTHOL WINS BLINDFOLD TEST.

Preferred over leading low-tar menthols in a test among 1,000 smokers. Yet it is lower in tar than all of them.

Anational independent research company asked a thousand blindfolded menthol smokers to smoke and compare leading low-tar menthol brands, while keeping tar and nicotine numbers in mind.
